ELECTRIC EYE WORKS MAGIC FOR INDUSTRY

Show Opening Today Bares 'Wonders.'

MAKE CHICAGO THE FIRST CITY IN THE WORLD

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

The electric eye, or photo-electric cell, in its latest applications to industry, and the newest types of high speed metal working machine tools are to be on exhibition in Chicago this week in two shows that are attracting unusual interest.

First of its kind in the middle west, the electronic exhibition opens this morning in the quarters of the Chicago Lighting institute in the Civic Opera building. It is to run for two weeks and the engineers regard it as a step toward establishment of a new industry, that of harnessing electrons for the use of man.

The photo-electric cell is old, but its uses are being expanded. At A Century of Progress exposition many of its uses were demostrated. At the show just opening visitors will see its application in industry.

How Public Is Protected.

For example, one machine now being perfected is for protection of manufacturers and consumers of soap and candy from metal fragments which sometimes accidentally get into a batch of goods. Metal in candy and soap has brought many an expensive lawsuit. In the new machine the goods are run under the electric eye, which spots any metal instantly and sounds an alarm. This machine may prove valuable, too, in the manufacture of Christmas mincemeat, fruit cakes and pies, in which tacks and nailheads occasionally work havoc.

The photo-electric cell, as described by its friends, the engineers, can see, hear, smell, taste and feel with a delicacy almost impossible for man's senses. One exhibit shows a smoke control device. An electric eye or nose is placed in a smokestack, and when too much carbon appears it turns on the alarm in the boiler room. In a counting machine the call is used to count packages, boxes and cans on a conveyor system. Any that are under weight flash a red light.

Automatic Window Lights.

In one room is a shop display window, darkened. When a visitor pauses before the glass the electric eye turns on the window lights, illuminating the display. Steel balls for ball bearings are run through a machine and the electric eye notes those which are undersize or oversize and tosses them out. Doors open automatically as people approach, a boon to waitresses carrying trays of dishes. In one room a phonograph record is played and the music is transmitted to a machine in another corner over a beam of light. This principle is being applied to aviation for transmission of messages between ground and plane.

Another device shows how an electric eye may be put on guard in banks, stores, and homes to safeguard against intruders. Another one demonstrates how an electric eye matches colors in silks and inks better than a human eye. Still another turns on the electric lights when blinds are drawn and daylight decreases. It operates beacons and street lights.

The new Wirephoto system [transmitting protographs by wire] is made possible by the photo-electric cell. Photographs are scanned by an uncanny electric eye and are borne by electrical impulses along wire to distant cities at approximately the speed of light. This is not among the displays.

The machine tool show is to be held Thursday at 205 West Wacker drive by the Chicago section of the American Society of Engineers. It is to be a machine shop practice demonstration, to which factory managers, engineers and shop superintendents from the middle west have been invited.

The aim is to acquaint the metal working industry with the latest development in machine tools. The society holds it has wide possibilities in stimulation of business and employment through rehabilitation of plants in which equipment now is obsolete.

Meanwhile the National Association of Master Plumbers is making unusual preparations for its 53d annual convention, to be held at the Stevens hotel starting June 25. More than 5,000 plumbing contractors and their families from all parts of the United States are expected to attend, according to John J. Calman, Chicago plumbing contractor and national president of the association.

8 SHOTS FIRED BY ASSASSINS AT PROSECUTOR

State's Attorney Courtney, at whom gunmen fired eight shots early yesterday, said last night he had a good idea of the identity of the gangsters. Five of the eight bullets struck the automobile in which Prosecutor Courtney was riding with Ald. Harry E. Perry [18th], and Detectives John Cronin and James McInerney.

The shooting occurred while the state's attorney's car was southbound in Normal boulevard, between 70th and 71st streets, shortly after 2 a. m. Although chased by Courtney and the policemen, the gunmen escaped.

"It was members of 'the mob' that fired the shots," Mr. Courtney asserted when he appeared at his office in the evening. By "the mob" the prosecutor was taken to mean the remnants of the Al Capone gang, who are trying to control some labor unions. Courtney, ever since he took office more than two years ago, has been conducting a campaign to oust gangsters from union control.

Receives Attack as Challenge.

"If the gang element thinks this cowardly attack will in any way retard the activities of my office against them they are mistaken," said Courtney. "They missed. I won't. This cowardly act is an invitation to give it to them stronger. We have a well laid out program.

"I've known such an attempt might be made ever since I took office and began my war on gangsters. Here I am, untouched by bullets and not afraid. It will not take long to drive out the last vestige of gangsterism from Chicago. There's going to be 'heat,' and lots of it."

Mr. Courtney, who is 39 years old and over 6 feet tall, discussed the attempted assassination calmly after reaching his office. It was expected all day that when he finished his sleep a series of raids would begin. But there were none. Nor was there any threat of immediate reprisals. Instead he went into conference with Capt. Daniel Gilbert, his chief investigator; Chief of Detectives John L. Sullivan, and Lieut. Thomas Kelly. In a few minutes he was ready for the newspaper men.

Gives Detailed Account of Affair.

"I was at a political meeting in the Hotel Sherman and left there with Ald. Perry, my neighbor, about 12:20 o'clock," said the prosecutor in his story of the shooting. "We drove south on Clark street to Archer avenue, then west to Canal street and south to 29th street.

"We turned over 29th street to Union avenue, and then south to 57th street and over to Morgan street and then south to 74th street. At this point Ald. Perry suggested that we get a bite of lunch in the Lauer restaurant at 63d street and Normal boulevard, so we swung around and went north on Halsted to 72d street and then over to Normal boulevard.

"The place was crowded and we had to wait a while for a table. While waiting we sat on stools in the front of the place."

Trailed to Restaurant, He Believes.

In answer to a question he said he and his party could be seen from the street as they sat on the stools. He added, however, that he believed the gunmen started following his car before he entered the restaurant.

"I think we were in the place about an hour," he resumed. "When we came out and started away Cronin was driving and McInerney was seated beside him. Perry was in the back with me, on my left. Instead of going around the block, as my driver usually does with the big car, he backed into 62d street and turned south.

"About a half block south of 70th street we saw some blue flame and Ald. Perry shouted 'What's going on?' I knew what was going on—that some one was shooting at us. A piece of glass stabbed me in the neck.

Foes Make Flank Attack.

"The first shot was aimed at the back of our car and was fired while the other car was behind us. The shooting kept up as the other car was passing us on the left. I looked around, fearing we were surrounded by cars full of gunmen. A car right behind us contained a young man and a girl. I knew they were all right.

"Our car stopped and I tried to open the window so I could talk to the driver. Meanwhile McInerney jumped out and opened the right side door to see if we had been shot. I yelled at him, 'Go after them,' and he jumped back into his seat and we started. By that time the other car was turning east into 72d street, and

British Chiefs See Hitler Aid; Talk of Peace

[Copyright: 1935: By the Associated Press.]

BERLIN, March 25 (Monday).—(AP)—Reichsfuehrer Hitler sprang a surprise today at the start of the conversations with Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, and Capt. Anthony Eden, British lord privy seal, by requesting they be brought to the chancellery to meet him at once. The request occasioned a sudden revision in the original program, which contemplated that preliminary conversations should be conducted between the British envoys and Foreign Minister von Neurath. Hitler had not been expected to confer with Sir John and Capt. Eden until tomorrow.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, March 24.—The most momentous political meeting in Europe since the Versailles peace conference began here tonight.

BARON VON NEURATH.

A few hours after their arrival Great Britain's two peace envoys, Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, and Capt. Anthony Eden, lord privy seal, met Baron Konstantin von Neurath, Germany's foreign minister, for a brief conversation at the British embassy. Simon will renew the conversations with Von Neurath at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning. Later in the day the Englishmen will see Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler.

Face Two Subjects.

Two subjects are on the program. One is whether or not Britain will recognize the fact of German rearmament and welcome Germany back into the comity of nations. The other is whether Germany is willing to return on terms of equality and play with the other nations in the European diplomatic club according to club rules.

If Germany "joins up" it means that the treaty of Versailles has gone glimmering. In the eyes of the Germans it never was a treaty. They consider it an imposed agreement—imposed by pistol point by the victorious allies on a defeated nation, and the British at least are not surprised that a rehabilitated Germany has taken her first opportunity to repudiate it.

French Put British in Hole.

The British might have preferred a more polite method of repudiation—what diplomats call a multilateral agreement. Germany took the rude unilateral way, and the realistic British are quite willing to recognize the fact. Whether they will dare, in the face of French opposition, to admit this recognition depends largely on the report Eden has given Simon to the conversations he had with Foreign Minister Pierre Laval of France in Paris yesterday.

SURVIVORS TELL OF TERRORS IN FLAMING TRAP

Fire Pictures

A full page of pictures of the Morton Grove roadhouse fire and the attempt to assassinate State's Attorney Courtney will be found on the back page of this edition.

An inquest will be held today over the charred bodies of three men and three women burned to death in the flames which swept the Club Rendezvous roadhouse in Morton Grove early yesterday.

It will mark the opening of investigations by state, county and village authorities into conditions which permitted a hundred merrymakers to be jammed into a small, flimsy structure provided with only two pitifully inadequate means of escape from the flames.

It will be the continuation of the campaign which started last night to prevent recurrence of such a tragedy when Sheriff John Toman ordered county highway police to visit every roadhouse in the county and determine if there were any other such fire traps among the country and village roadhouses of the county.

Survivors Called for Inquest.

At the inquest the coroner's jury will hear stories of the survivors of the fire which left six dead and 16 in hospitals. Officials of Morton Grove will be asked what fire regulations permitted the existence of the conditions which brought about the disaster.

Deputy Coroners Victor Schlager and Frank Donahue will conduct the inquest, to be held at the Bradley & Haben undertaking rooms in Niles Center. Interested spectators will be Chief Herbert Burns of the county highway police, Sheriff Toman, Assistant State's Attorney Marshall Kearney, and Frank Doherty, chief deputy state fire marshal.

In the meantime crowds of curiosity seekers streamed to the heap of smoking ruins on Dempster road, just east of Austin avenue, which a few hours before had been a gay night-life spot.

Death Scene: Season's Gayest Crowd.

The largest and gayest crowd of the season was there Saturday night and Sunday morning in the transformed bungalow about three miles west of Evanston.

In the front was a frame addition to the building proper, comprising the main dance floor, some six feet lower than the level of the main part of the building housing the dining room, bar and kitchen.

There were only two exits. The main one was a narrow, 2 foot 7 inch doorway leading into a small anteroom on the front, east side. From the anteroom egress was by a 3 foot doorway. This door, contrary to every known fire regulation, opened inward.

The only other means of exit from the bungalow was through the kitchen.

That was reached by a narrow corridor and through a doorway only 1 foot 10 inches in width.

Large Midnight Crowd.

Shortly after midnight the main crowds began to stream into the place. Two parties were of Northwestern university students who had come from the annual WAA-MU musical comedy given at the school. One of these young men, receiving congratulations for his part in the performance, was shortly to die in the raging inferno.

A three piece band was blaring popular tunes. The dance floor was packed, scarcely giving room for couples to move about in time with the music. Every table in the dining room was filled and there was no room in front of the bar.

Elmer Cowdrey, 8526 Mansfield avenue, Morton Grove, owner of the roadhouse, said that he had been compelled to turn down many reservations. Merrymaking was at its height in the gayly festooned roadhouse.

"Fire!" Brings Frantic Rush.

Suddenly, from one corner of the dance floor came a puff of flame and a billow of smoke. It came from near a gas heater, suspended from the ceiling.

"Fire!" The scream that has started countless panics, burst out.

Mrs. Rose Cowdrey, wife of the owner, was seated at a table in the dining room.

She leaped to her feet, seized a seltzer bottle and started toward the first burst of fire.

Again sounded the cry, "Fire! Fire!" There was a frenzy of fear among

ARCHAEOLOGISTS EYE PREHISTORIC CLEW TO MAN'S FIRST BREWERY

Philadelphia, Pa., March 24.—(AP)—Archæologists are on the trail of the world's first brewery. It may have been operating, they think, in Mesopotamia some 6,000 years ago.

The only clew to it is a flat seal found in the ancient mound of Tepe Gawra, where ruins of 20 "world's oldest" cities, piled one on the other, trace the story of man back to neolithic times.

Uncovered by diggers from the University of Pennsylvania museum and the American School of Oriental Research, the seal shows two men stirring the contents of a vat with long poles.

"FLYING DUCHESS" FEARED LOST ON FLIGHT TO AFRICA

LONDON, March 25.—[Monday.]—(AP)—England's 69 year old "flying duchess," the wife of the duke of Bedford, was feared lost today in her small plane somewhere on the route of a 3,000 mile flight to South Africa. Accompanied by her pilot, Flight Lieutenant Preston, the duchess took off five days ago and nothing has been heard from her since, the Daily Express says.

Grave anxiety for the safety of his adventurous wife was expressed at his estate, Woburn abbey, by the duke, who was an aide de camp to the late King Edward VII. and then to King George V. The duchess planned to fly over the Atlas mountains, Morocco, across the Sahara to Nigeria, and thence to Khartoum, returning to London via the Imperial airways route.

The duchess made a record flight to India and back in seven and one-half days with Capt. Barnard as pilot in 1929 and a record flight to Cape Town the following year in 20 days with the same pilot. She obtained a pilot's "A" license two years ago.

RAINS HERE TRY TO MAKE UP FOR DROUTH OF 1934

As if trying to offset the effects of last summer's drouth, Mother Nature yesterday poured rain on Chicago and gave the city an increased excess of precipitation for the month and year. At 7 o'clock last night the excess for the month stood at .52 of an inch and for the year at .41 of an inch. By 9 p. m. half an inch more rain fell. Today's forecast is for warm cloudy weather, with colder temperatures and more showers due tomorrow night.

Poland to Swap German Girl Spy for Baron

WARSAW, March 24.—(AP)—A beautiful German woman spy found her hope of happiness bound up today with the fate of Baron Yurek [George] von Sosnowski, the Polish captain whose espionage career caused the beheading of two German noblewomen.

Theodora Ogurek and possibly the husband she married in prison will be returned to Germany in exchange for Von Sosnowski, who was condemned to life imprisonment in the reich. The newlyweds, now in separate prisons, would be reunited.

Miss Ogurek was born in Polish Silesia when that province was part of Germany. Her family, Polish in origin, was Germanized for generations, and her father was an officer in the Germany army.

Volunteers Aid as Spy.

So keenly did she resent that eastern provinces were sliced from Germany under the Versailles treaty that she volunteered to spy for the country she regards as her fatherland.

Greater than her love for Germany was her love for Ernst Drazga, who comes from a part of Silesia that remained German and is therefore a German citizen. They joined in a dangerous espionage career.

They were arrested more than a year ago and tried in January, 1934, before a Warsaw emergency court. Drazga, because of his German citizenship, faced life imprisonment, but the girl seemed doomed to death.

Meanwhile Leon Sliwinski, a Warsaw attorney engaged to defend her, was greatly impressed by the pluck and patriotism of the young girl who stood her hardships unflinchingly.

Poland Permits Marriage.

He suggested to Drazga that he marry Theodora in order to procure German citizenship for her. Polish authorities, who appreciated that Miss Ogurek spied not for money but because of patriotism, granted permission for the marriage. A dispensation "in articulo mortis" was given by the church. This obviated the necessity of publishing banns three weeks in advance.

Both permits came the night before the trial. It was late, but the prison haplain consented to perform the ceremony in the prison chapel.

Sliwinski and one of his colleagues were the two official witnesses, but the little chapel was filled with guards. They even stood between the bride and bridegroom to prevent them from exchanging a single word. The next morning the trial of the man and wife started. Life imprisonment was decreed for both.

U. S. Couple on Trial Today.

PARIS, March 24.—(AP)—Twenty-one accused spies for soviet Russia, including ten women, will go on trial secretly tomorrow with the confessed American chief, Robert Gordon Switz, and his wife virtually assured of acquittal after 15 months in prison.

The immediate release of the Switzes will be sought by their attorney on the ground that their confessions unmasked and resulted in breaking up what is perhaps the greatest spy ring since the war, suspected of trafficking in military secrets of France and other countries. Court officials said Switz and his wife probably would be deported.

PLANE GOES TO SEA, GETS INJURED MAN, FLIES TO HOSPITAL

New York, March 24.—(AP)—A coast guard plane flew 90 miles to sea today, removed an injured man from the S. S. Cornelia, and returned him to a hospital at Cape May, N. J., for medical attention.

Coast guard communications said Lieut. Richard Bruke piloted the coast guard amphibian, No. 129, to the steamer, removed Irvin Armistead, 33, of Matthews county, Virginia, and brought him ashore for hospitalization.

Armistead fell through an open hatch. He suffered a possible skull fracture and possible internal injuries.

MELLON MARKS 80TH BIRTHDAY WITH DAUGHTER

Mellon could not be reached today. On his arrival yesterday, however, he sent out word that he was here for "business and health" and would not see reporters.

For a time it was uncertain just what birthday the former cabinet member was celebrating. In the 1918-'19 edition of Who's Who the date of his birth is listed as March 24, 1852. When he became secretary of the treasury in 1921 under President Harding the year of his birth was announced as 1853.

the merrymakers and they dashed toward the one exit, screaming, trampling, pushing, hitting out in terror. They smashed against the door and drilled about frantically until a space could be forced to allow it to swing inward.

Behind the bar in the dining room, Cowdrey shouted to James Bradford, 2301 West Adams street, the chef, to call the fire department. He then sprang on a chair and vainly shouted for the crowds to make their way toward the rear of the bungalow.

His cries went unheeded.

In the dancing room the flames already had engulfed the entire space, spreading through the highly inflammable drapes and streamers which festooned the walls and ceilings.

This blazing cloth began to shower its fragments on the frenzied, fighting throng below, bathing them in a fiery rain. The electric lights went out, and the scene was made more terrible in the ghastly glow of flames.

Many who could not fight their way to the door leaped through windows, heedless of the gashes torn in their bodies and faces.

Fred Nash, 7716 Eastlake terrace, was one of those who managed to fight his way to the anteroom and comparative safety for the moment.

With him were four other members of his party. In the midst of the jam in the anteroom, Nash suddenly turned toward the door of the dance floor, which again had been jammed shut.

Sees Friend Disappear in Blaze.

Through the glass panel he saw his friend, Robert Wolfe, 22 years old, of 1513 Hood avenue. Wolfe's clothing was a mass of flame. Half crazed with fright and pain, Wolfe was clawing at the door and screaming:

"Help me! Help me! God—I'm burning up!"

Shouting to two other members of his group, Nash turned back.

In that moment the flames burst through the thin walls of the anteroom and Wolfe disappeared in the inferno.

Nash made his way to safety.

In the meantime, the fire departments of Morton Grove and Niles Center had arrived. It was too late to save the building, but firemen and police, led by Fire Chief Peter Schuetz of Morton Grove, disregarded personal safety in an effort to rescue victims.

Schuetz and others were seriously burned, but many owe their lives to them. George Fredericks, head of the Morton Grove police, fought his way twelve times into the blazing structure to bring out victims.

Wife Finds Husband Among Dead.

Mrs. Florence Hronek, 2015 Wellington avenue, was one of a party with her husband, James, and friends. She was caught in the stampeding mob when the first cry of "Fire" was heard. She was separated from her husband and party and swept toward the door.

In vain she sought him among the survivors, then found his charred body at the undertaking rooms. He could be identified only by a ruby ring and a gold pencil.

By the time daylight had broken, and the once gay Club Rendezvous was only a heap of smoking brick and lumber, Cowdrey was at the police station, telling his story to Herbert Burns, chief of the county highway police, and Frank Donohue and Eugene Reynolds of the coroner's office.

Nervously smoking cigaret after cigaret, Cowdrey made a perfunctory statement as to what had happened, then signed a perfunctory written report of the statement and was released.

Inquest to Be Held Today.

He will appear at the inquest today.

"This ruins me," he said, "I'm wiped out."

Cowdrey, who formerly operated a filling station in Rogers Park, said he had leased the bungalow two years ago from an Earl Schuler, for $35 a month. He built the front addition about that time, he said, and invested a total of some $10,000 in the place, including the construction, furnishings and other equipment.

He had no insurance of any kind, Cowdrey also declared, because insurance companies did not consider the place a good risk.

Plans for Investigation.

The main part of the county investigation of the disaster will devolve upon the coroner's office. Deputy Donahue, who seemed convinced that the blaze started from a cigaret or match, rather than from the heating system, declared, however, that every possibility would be investigated.

Prosecutor Kearney, on another phase of the county probe, said he would investigate the building code and fire ordinances of Morton Grove. Sheriff Toman announced his inspection of all other roadhouses in the county.

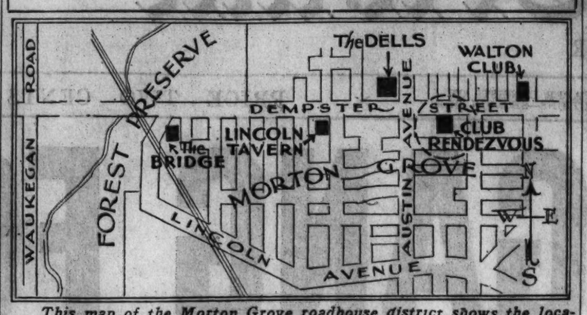
Mr. Dougherty, representing the state, will confine his work to cooperation with the sheriff's office, and in an advisory capacity to the county authorities.

Check on Fire Inspection.

Mayor Dilg of Morton Grove and Charles Brunke of the village volunteer fire department both said they would determine whether the regular inspection prescribed by the building code of the village had been made.

The blaze at the Rendezvous was the second fatal roadhouse fire in Morton Grove since 1933. On Feb. 15 of that year the Club Walton burned to the ground, taking the lives of a woman and her 3½ year old daughter. The Dells roadhouse, diagonally across the street from the Rendezvous, was burned to the ground in September, 1929. It was rebuilt and again was left a mass of wreckage when four armed men seized a watchman and set fire to the building last Oct. 8.

MORTON GROVE ROADHOUSE DISTRICT



This map of the Morton Grove roadhouse district shows the location of the Club Rendezvous, scene of the fire which took six lives yesterday. Also shown are The Dells, razed by fire last fall; the Walton club, in which a mother and daughter burned to death two years ago; the Lincoln tavern, and The Bridge. Matt Kolb, prohibition-era boss of suburban beer runners, was shot to death by gangsters in the Club Morton, formerly The Bridge.

HEROISM OF CLUB CHECKROOM GIRL EXACTS HER LIFE

Fire Survivors Tell of Mad Rush to Escape.

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

Among survivors' stories of the frenzied scene ensuing when flames engulfed the Club Rendezvous early yesterday and caused a mad rush for the two faulty exits, the accounts given of the heroism of a 22 year old cloak room girl stand out as one of the most dramatic vignettes of the tragic blaze which left six dead of burns and 16 others in hospitals.

The hat check girl, Miss Arlene Harvey, 8023 North Kilpatrick avenue, Niles Center, handed out overcoats to guests who were too stunned to realize they were endangering their own and others' lives while they insisted on getting their wraps. This congestion in the narrow anteroom off which opened the one exit in the front of the roadhouse was responsible for several deaths.

Girl Loses Life at Post.

Miss Harvey who was engaged to be married to Clifford Peterson, 25 years old, School and Dempster streets, a radio repairman, was trapped in her little cubbyhole and lost her life in the holocaust.

"I never will forgive myself for stupidly standing there waiting for Miss Harvey to hand me my coat—my automobile keys were in it—and letting those other men do the same," said Arnold Anderson, 23 years old, of 426 Belmont avenue, who is employed in the experimental laboratory of the International Harvester company. He is among the injured in St. Francis hospital, Evanston.

"I never saw such pluckiness," he said, tears forming in his swollen eyes, a cigaret shaking in his blistered hands, stained purple with the potassium permanganate solution smeared on the hands, faces and necks of the hospitalized victims. "I knew my wife, Robin, was outside safely, although she had gone back to help two women who had fainted on the stairway leading from the balcony. Why I didn't pick up the check girl and take her out I don't know."

Girl Refuses to Leave Post.

Another St. Francis patient, who had escaped from the holocaust by knocking the glass out of the front door when he could not turn the knob to open it, and squeezing through, paid tribute to the checkroom girl as "the coolest, bravest person I ever saw in my life." was William George Ireland Jr., 23 years old, 821 Buckingham place. He said he yelled to the men around the check stand to let her out, and told her to get out, but she smilingly continued to hand out coats.

First among the hundred merrymakers to smell the smoke of the fire and notify a waiter, were five Northwestern university students and one former student, according to Miss Geraldine McGraw, 19, of 1551 Juneway terrace, one of the student party. The waiter went to a doorway leading to the women's room in the southwest corner of the dance hall, opened it, and flames popped out, she said. Included in her party were five members of the cast of Waa-Mu, annual musical production of the university, in which she had danced. A member of the cast with them, Fred R. Anderson, Phi Kappa Sigma, of Eau Claire, Wis, waited for his coat, and died in the flames.

Tells of Rush to Rear Door.

James H. Bradford, 32, of 2901 West Adams street, chef in the tavern, who summoned the fire department, told how guests, swarming through the kitchen to the one rear exit, knocked him over as he telephoned. Burned critically, he is in the St. Francis hospital.

Because he stopped to help three girls and one man through a pantry window before he made his exit through what was then a burning window frame, forming a collar of flames about his throat, Gerald Mickelson, 20 years old, 6856 Olcott avenue, Edison Park, may lose his eyesight. He is in a critical condition, Dr. H. A. Grennan, intern at St. Francis, said.

The death of his sweetheart, Helen Johnson, 22 years old of Milwaukee, formerly of Duluth, Minn., is being kept from Norman Rettig, 31 years, old of 6418 North Richmond street, a fire protection engineer, because of his critical condition.

Hopes for Her Safety.

"I wonder if Helen is safe," Rettig said, moving his burned hands. "They won't tell me. I had her in front of me as we neared the front door. Some one was trying to push the door, when it opened inward. I got there and knocked out a window. Then the crowd piled behind me got panicky and shoved me through. I hope Helen got out."

Unaware that St. Francis hospital authorities feared for her life when she entered the hospital, or that the large, deep burns on her face will leave scars, as doctors predict, Miss Lois Holmes, 20 years old, of Decatur, a Millikin university student, said gaily, "O, I'm all right. I stopped to pick up my new suit topcoat and got pushed over or I would not be burned. I got the coat, though."

She was in a party of six, most of them Northwestern students or former students, who had attended the Waa-Mu show earlier. Her escort, Carl Oldroyd, 21 years old, of Arkansas City, Kas., a senior, was the last of the six to leave the rear door. Overcome by smoke, he fell through the door, and off the back porch. He is less seriously burned, and is in St. Francis, as is Fred Shudel, 22, of Decatur, former Northwestern student, who has slight burns.

Last Man Out Tells Story.

Charles Carter, 26, 1101 Chestnut street, Wilmette, an optician, probably was the last man out of the front door.

"I knew the two women in our party, Miss Bernice Olsen, 6213 North Rockwell street, and Mrs. Florence Hronek, were safe," he said, "and I supposed James Hronek was also out. But when Florence saw me come out without him, she tried to rush back into the flames. I had to hold her. I have just learned that her husband was killed."

FIRE DESTROYS HOME; NEIGHBORS CHIP IN TO ERECT NEW ONE

Denver, Colo., March 24.—(AP)—The spirit of friendship is moving the neighbors of William Crihfield to give his family a new start in life.

Last week fire destroyed the Crihfields' house and claimed the life of their 11 month old son. Lacking funds to rebuild their home, the father and mother and four remaining children went to live with relatives.

Then neighbors circulated a petition for contributions with which to build a new house for the victims. Today they had collected $225 and the digging of the basement for the structure had been started.

Evanston Wife Seriously Burned Lighting Heater

Mrs. Della Beinlick, 30 years old, 1723 Crane street, Evanston, was seriously burned yesterday morning when her clothing caught fire as she ignited a hot water heater in the bathroom of her home. Her husband, Joseph Beinlick, heard her screams and beat out the flames. She was taken to the St. Francis hospital.

MEYER WILL SUE MISS AMES FOR ENGLISH DIVORCE

Bertie A. Meyer, London theatrical producer, is going to be sure that he is divorced from the former Rosemary Ames Ketting Meyer, according to an announcement yesterday in London.

On Saturday Mrs. Meyer, a motion picture actress, divorced her husband here on grounds of desertion, and two hours later married Abner J. Stilwell, vice president of the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company and mother, chairman of the reorganization committee of Middle West Utilities corporation.

Contending that his wife's decree is not valid in Great Britain, Meyer intends to institute divorce proceedings in London. Meyer and Miss Ames married there on Jan. 6, 1932.

Meanwhile the Stilwell honeymoon plans were stymied by the business interests of the principals. Stilwell must appear in federal court next week. Mrs. Stilwell can make no plans until she learns if she must return to Hollywood for retakes in her new picture, "Our Little Girl," in which she plays Shirley Temple's mother.

FILIPINOS HAIL BEGINNING OF FREEDOM ROAD

Arrange for Plebiscite to Ratify Charter.

Throughout the night the people celebrated as word flashed from village to village in the provinces that President Roosevelt had approved the proposed constitution for a commonwealth government that is scheduled to be replaced by a republic ten years hence.

There was an undercurrent of talk of the possibility of making the commonwealth government permanent instead of replacing it by a wholly independent republic in another decade. However, no leader would speak publicly, especially in the absence of Manuel Quezon, president of the insular senate, who is in Washington. Quezon is to be president of the new government.

Legislature Meets April 8.

The insular legislature will meet April 8 to pass a bill authorizing a plebiscite at which the people will either ratify or reject the commonwealth constitution.

Almost unanimous acceptance appeared certain, the only opposition arising thus far has been from Emilio Aguinaldo, leader of an insurrection in 1898 against American rule, and from the "Sakdal"—the Communist party.

The bill to authorize the plebiscite extends the ballot to women who qualified and to residents in the non-Christian provinces. Three million ballots are being printed. They quote in effect article four of the Tydings act passed by the American congress, as follows:

"A favorable vote on the constitution will be considered an expression favorable to independence. An opposing vote means the present government continues."

Union of Major Parties.

Politicians immediately went to work on plans for coalition of the major parties, which appeared assured. Officers of the government already decided upon besides Quezon include Senator Sergio Osmena as vice president, with the education portfolio; Manuel Roxas, present speaker of the house, as speaker of the assembly, and Claro Recto, head of the recent constitutional convention, as a justice of the Supreme court.

American opinion here on the big step toward independence remained extremely conservative and seemed to be awaiting the next move.

Some Filipinos believe the economic provisions of the Tydings act are bad and should be changed but are chary of making any alterationz in the political provisions. Some Americans believe both economic and political provisions should be changed.

START AMATEUR CRAFT EXHIBIT HERE TOMORROW

Hundreds of the products made by amateur craftsmen in attic and basement workshops will be placed on display tomorrow afternoon in a contest and exhibit sponsored by the National Homeworkshop guild in the Hibbard, Spencer, Bartlett building, 211 East North Water street.

Lawyers, judges, stenographers and others will show the results of tedious work, sometimes for months, on articles made in their spare moments. Entries have been received from all parts of the country.

Among the exhibits are a caged lion carved from a solid block of wood, a complete mansion, a bridge table made of 1,159 pieces of eighty different woods, locomotives, and yachts.

VICTIM'S PISTOL IS A DUD, BUT ROBBERS FLEE

John Moreno was in his liquor store at 11 South Kedzie avenue last night with his wife, Emily, his daughter, Marlene, 3 years old, and son, Donald, 5, when three robbers entered. Moreno seized an old pistol and pulled the trigger five times and the gun merely clicked.

One of the robbers walked up to Moreno and hit him on the head. Then the three, frightened by the screams of Mrs. Moreno, departed without loot.

Chicagoans' Car Stalls on Tracks in Indiana.

Three Chicago high school students were injured, one fatally, when their automobile stalled last night on the New York Central railroad crossing at Ogden Dunes, 12 miles east of Gary, Ind., and was struck by a west bound passenger train. The party was returning from an outing at the dunes. The crossing is protected only by warning lights.

Ewell Jordan, 17 years old, who lived at 65th street and University avenue, was fatally injured. The others hurt are Miss Jean Peterson, 18 years old, 7118 Dobson street, who may not survive, and Kenneth Bergwald, 17, of 6056 Kenwood avenue. Both were taken to the Methodist hospital in Gary.

County's Toll Grows.

Two trafic deaths yesterday in Cook county increased the 1935 automobile fatalities to 207. At 2 p. m. the total of trafic deaths within the Chicago city limits stood at 169 and the number of injured at 3,232. Yesterday's deaths:

Mrs. Mildred Issen, 48 years old, of 1316 South Avers avenue, was killed at Independence boulevard and 14th street, when she was struck by the car of Attorney Meyer M. Gilbert, 25 years old, 1524 South Lawndale avenue. Gilbert is held by Fillmore police for the inquest today.

Amherst M. Rogers, 68 years old, 8433 Crandon avenue, died in St. Bernard's hospital of injuries received Saturday night when struck by an automobile at 73d street and Vincennes avenue. Harvey Blakely, 347 South Normal parkway, driver of the car, was not held, but was ordered to attend the inquest today. This accident would have been impossible on an elevated highway.

State Highway Policeman John B. Conlin, 30 years old, 4106 Van Buren street, incurred a fracture of the skull and serious internal injuries yesterday when his motorcycle collided with an automobile at Jackson boulevard and Damen avenue. But Wilson, 27 years old, 2137 Washington boulevard, driving east in Jackson boulevard, started to turn suddenly into Damen avenue and Policeman Conlin's motorcycle crashed into the car. Wilson was held by the Warren avenue police.

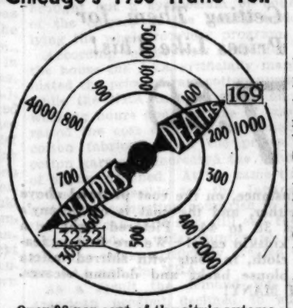
Chicagoans Hurt in South.

Mrs. Jennie Weiss, 62 years old, 1217 Independence boulevard, a widow, her granddaughter, Joyce Gertler, 4 years old, and Miss Elsie Edelman, 26, of 3251 Washington boulevard, are recovering in a hospital at Macon, Ga., of injuries incurred on Saturday night when the automobile in which they were riding overturned near there. Miss Lillian Weiss, 32 years old, daughter of Mrs. Jennie Weiss, Mitzi Gross, 11 years old, another granddaughter, and Miss Fannie Grossman, 1224 Independence boulevard, were less seriously injured.

Both legs of Achilles Scachitti, 46 years old, 2415 Arthington street, operator of a newspaper stand on the northeast corner of Roosevelt road and Western avenue, were crushed when an automobile ran over the curb and pinned him against a light post.

AVOIDABLE

Chicago's 1935 Trafic Toll



Over 98 per cent of the city's automobile accidents are of a nature physically impossible on an elevated highway.

TRIAL OF CHASE IN U. S. MURDER TO JURY TODAY

Late this afternoon a jury in the United States District court of Judge Philip L. Sullivan will retire to determine the fate of John Paul Chase, former California bootlegger charged with the murder last Nov. 27 of Inspector Samuel P. Cowley of the department of justice. If he is convicted, the jury must determine whether he shall be hanged or sentenced to life imprisonment, for no other sentence can be imposed under the new federal statute.

Chase, who is 33 years old, was the companion of Baby Face Nelson [Lester Gillis] when Inspector Cowley and Federal Agent Herman Hollis were slain near Barrington. Nelson was fatally wounded in the battle. Chase's defense was that the government men were the aggressors and that he returned their fire in self defense.

United States District Attorney Dwight H. Green will open the arguments for the government when court convenes this morning. He will be followed by Defense Attorneys William B. Henry and W. W. O'Brien, and Brien McMahon, special assistant to the United States attorney general, will close for the prosecution. The jury is expected to retire about 4:30 p. m.

BARE FULL STORY OF KIDNAPING OF YANK IN MEXICO

Bandits Wound 1, Take 3 in Camp Raid.

MEXICO CITY, March 24.—(AP)—With rescue prospects still uncertain, the first authentic story of the kidnaping of Mark Fowler, American mining engineer, reached here today. A rebel band, whose chieftains are known, swept down on Fowler's mining camp in a hail of bullets, seriously wounding one man and abducting the American.

Vremsak Unreported.

American embassy officials were divided in opinion today regarding the progress of efforts to free Fowler. George Shaw, American consul at San Luis Potosi, went to the state of Zacatecas yesterday and failed to return on schedule this morning.

Likewise no news was received at the embassy or in Aguascallentes regarding Mrs. Louise McKinney, who rode alone yesterday into the state of Zacatecas in a single-handed attempt to locate Louis Vremsak, who she says was kidnaped while they were treasure hunting in the Mexican hills ten days ago.

Federal troops were searching nearby areas in three states for the kidnapers.

Attack Camp In Jalapa.

Authentic details of Fowler's kidnaping, received here for the first time today, said the engineer and two Mexican assistants, a Mexican cook and two servants, were surprised by a band headed by two chieftains, Simon Solis and Juan Billreal, who attacked La Leonora mining camp in Jalapa.

The group tried to defend themselves but rebel bullets wounded the cook and forced the others to surrender. The attackers took Fowler and his two assistants, leaving the others. The cook is in a serious condition in a hospital here.

EX-FIREMAN ENDS LIFE.

Ernest F. Klatt, 73 years old, a retired city fireman, ended his life by hanging himself in his home at 1425 West 71st street yesterday morning. He became despondent after the death of his wife last September.

URGE CONGRESS TO PROVIDE 180 BILLIONS MORE

Interest 2 Billion Greater than Present Receipts.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 24.—[Special.]—The 74th congress, which soon will pass the largest appropriation bill in the history of the world, is regarded as one of the wildest in the history of the republic. Some idea of the astronomical reaches of its spending imagination is indicated by appropriation bills pending in both houses with a grand total of more than 180 billions of dollars.

The total would have been a modest sum, however, but for a single bill introduced by Representative Matthew A. Dunn [Dem., Pa.], a blind member whose appropriation measure is designed "to end poverty in the United States," if not to end all appropriations. It would set aside 100 billion dollars for public works.

Expects Record to Stand.

Mr. Roosevelt's works bill will be the largest ever passed, but Mr. Dunn's is by far the largest ever introduced. He thinks the record will stand unless inflation sets in and they start spending real money.

Even without Mr. Dunn's contribution, the house of representatives, with its 433 members, has rushed the public treasury for 75 billion, 326 million, 720 thousand dollars, whereas the 96 senators have asked for only 17 billion, 657 million, 644 thousand.

The grand total of 180 billion was obtained by eliminating all duplications; that is to say, a bill in one house was not counted if it had a counterpart in the other. Likewise, the totals for each house were obtained by eliminating all but one representative piece of legislation on each subject. For example, there were 35 bonus bills, each in the amount of some 2 billion dollars, in the house of representatives, while only one was counted.

Under $100,000 Chicken Feed.

All bills under $100,000 were eliminated as mere chicken feed in this survey. Neither was any consideration given to those innumerable private bills which clutter up the calendars, bills for the relief of Oscar Plotz or the fishing smack Jupiter. Other bills not included were those which merely create some corporation or authority, with indefinite appropriations, or a blank check on the treasury. Some of these would run into sizable sums.

The general purpose of the bills which go after the big money is to redistribute the wealth, and they reflect certain signs of the times associated with Huey Long and Father Coughlin. Second largest on the list is the Townsend old age pension bill, which would dip into the pockets of the taxpayers at the rate of some 24 billion dollars a year. Third in line is a 10 billion dollar measure to refinance farm mortgages introduced by Representative Harold Knutson [Rep., Minn.]. This, however, is tied with a bill to guarantee work for everybody, fathered by Representative George C. Sadowski [Dem., Mich.].

Five Billions for Roads.

Other substantial totals are achieved by bills to pay the soldiers' bonus, to increase the HOLC and the RFC lending capacities, to set up farm tenant homes corporations and farm products purchasing corporations, to create central banks and build roads in a big way. Representative Kent Keller [Dem., Ill.] has a bill to spend 5 billion dollars on hard roads.

The sum of 180 billion dollars is by far more money than the combined appropriations by congress in the history of the country. It is four and a half times the 1932 national income of 40 billion dollars. It is almost four and a half times the total bank deposits in the United States—approximately 42 billion dollars.

It is more than two-thirds of the total national wealth, estimated at 250 billion dollars in 1932. It is six times the national debt, which will approximate 30 billion dollars at the end of the fiscal year. It is more than 50 times the total annual receipts of the United States government, approximately 3½ billion dollars.

Interest Alone Exceeds Income.

The annual interest alone on 180 billion dollars is almost 2 billion dollars more than the total receipts of the federal government—5 billion 400 million at 3 per cent.

Yet, this sum of 180 billion dollars would not begin to finance Huey Long's plan to "make every man a king," for it would equal only $1,384 for every man, woman and child in the United States. Huey would give them $5,000.

DIES OF INJURY IN FALL.

Mrs. Margaret Young, 24 years old, died yesterday in St. Bernard's hospital from injuries received a month ago when she fell from a second floor window in her home at 6808 Perry avenue. She told police she slipped while trying to open the window.

SEIZED AS SPY

BRITISH GROOM DECLINES TO SAY "I DO" AT ALTAR

LONDON, March 24.—(AP)—Right where he should have said "I do," Leslie Kitching shook his head, so his wedding to Eva Horton today was called off.

While the bride and her attendants sat and rested the minister talked to Kitching in the vestry, but he could not budge him.

BELGIAN LABOR VIEW SOUGHT ON GOING OFF GOLD

BRUSSELS, March 24.—(AP)—A secret meeting of the executive committee of the Labor party was held tonight to discuss the eventuality of devaluation of Belgium's currency on a 25 per cent basis.

The meeting took on unusual significance as Paul van Zeeland, new premier, is drawing up a list of ministers for his cabinet and will announce its formation tomorrow. The Labor meeting was called to find out if Laborites would agree to devaluation, it was believed.

Since Laborites will be included in the new government the party's views on the critical monetary question would have to be ascertained for any decision on the repeatedly rumored possibility Belgium will go off the gold standard.

CONGRESS TURNS TO INFLATION AS PROSPERITY LURE

Confidence in New Deal Fading Rapidly.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 24.—[Special.]—With confidence waning in the New Deal's recovery expedients, congress is turning toward currency inflation as a last resort to superinduce the return of prosperity. The old hard times cry for more and cheaper money has become a swelling chorus on Capitol hill.

Both houses last week ventured into the wild waves of inflation, notwithstanding the advice to statesmen by Prof. Edwin W. Kemmerer, former Budget Director Lewis Douglas, and other sound money leaders to "hang your clothes on a hickory limb but don't go near the water."

In voting to pay the veterans' bonus with 2 billion dollars of greenbacks the congressmen plunged right in and waded out as far as the lifelines provided by the bill to save the country from the undertow of uncontroled inflation.

Ears Tuned for Call.

The senators, with their billion dollar silver rider to the work relief bill, gingerly wet their feet and hesitated, listening to the call of the congressmen to "come on in; the water's fine."

The house chose the Patman bonus bill in preference to the Vinson bill because the Patman bill is definitly inflationary. The greenbacks that would be issued would not be backed by any metallic reserve. They would constitute paper money, pure and simple—printing press money. These greenbacks would be pumped into circulation as fast as the veterans presented the adjusted service certificates for redemption.

But in the terms of the measure it is to be a controled inflation. The bill provides for the retirement of federal reserve notes and other currency from circulation after 2 billions of greenbacks have been issued, whenever the wholesale price level rises above the wholesale price level prevailing between 1921 and 1929.

Provision Called Meaningless.

Anti-inflationists attacked this provision as meaningless. They argued that long before the price level rises to that of 1921-'29 the new greenbacks would drive 2 billions of federal reserve notes out of circulation in accord with Gresham's theory of economics.

This principle, which bears the name of Sir Thomas Gresham, Queen Elizabeth's financial agent, is that "bad money drives out good," in other words, convertible paper money such as the Patman bill greenbacks would drive money with a metallic base into hoarding. You would pay your bills in greenbacks but tuck the federal reserve note away for a rainy day.

In addition the excess reserves of the federal reserve banks would be increased tremendously, although they already are so vast as to cause concern over the risk of a great credit inflation. If the senate should pass the Patman bill the President will veto it.

Compromise Is Expected.

There would be sufficient votes in the house to override the veto. If the senate should sustain a veto a compromise on a part prepayment of the bonus would be brought forward. Evidently a bonus bill of some sort will become law.

While the house embraced inflation by a majority of three, there was no counting of noses on the issue in the senate. Senator Elmer Thomas [Dem., Okla.] had talked for two days in favor of inflation via silver certificates, and Senator Carter Glass [Dem., Va.], a sound money man, finally accepted the Thomas silver rider in a modified form in order to get the work relief bill passed before Senator Huey Long [Dem., La.] could reach Washington tomorrow and start another filibuster.

Senator Glass said the rider would be eliminated in the conference committee of the two houses. But Senator Thomas will renew the fight when the bonus bill reaches the senate. Then there will be a showdown in the senate on inflation.

Cheap Money Boosts Prices.

"It is my conviction," said Senator Thomas, "that if we will place real money in circulation money will be plentiful; when money becomes plentiful, money becomes cheap; when it becomes cheap, prices go up; when prices go up, there will be a profit in production, and those who produce will go to the banks and borrow. They will then want to borrow in order to produce.

"We have tried everything else. We have tried the NRA and the AAA and almost every other combination of the alphabet we can devise, but we have not tried money. Instead of putting more money in circulation we are taking money out of circulation from day to day. We had less money in circulation last week by $31,000,000 than we had in circulation on the first of last January. We had in circulation last week one billion dollars less than was in circulation at the time Roosevelt became President."

Confidence in New Deal Fades.

The loss of confidence in the efficacy of the Roosevelt recovery measures is beginning to permeate the ranks of the Democrats in congress. This became apparent following the slump in the price of cotton, which sent a shiver through the whole organism of the New Deal.

The AAA had doubled the price of cotton and brought a semblance of prosperity to the south, not, however, without a good deal of misery for the share croppers. The government had made loans to cotton planters on their crops which had had the effect of pegging the price of cotton at 12 cents a pound. The price suddenly fell and left the government holding the bag with an equity in 5,500,000 bales, about half the entire production planned for 1935.

At 12 cents a pound American cotton was pegged above the world market price. Foreign purchasers accordingly turned to other countries where cotton was to be had at a cheaper price. With the AAA deliberately restricting American production, other cotton producing countries increased their acreage. As a result the export of American cotton fell off 2 million bales last year and Brazil, China, and other countries increased their production 2,300,000 bales.

Slump Stirs Congress.

When the price tumbled Washington was thrown into a ferment of excitement. Some theorized that the slump was due to the decline in the value of the English pound sterling. The senate voted an investigation of the nefarious influences it felt certain were at the bottom of the mystery. In the house the debate on the bill to amend the Bankhead cotton restriction act brought out a symposium of doubts of the efficacy of the theory underlying the whole recovery program.

According to the view presented in the house the AAA artificially manipulated the price of raw cotton upward while the NRA through reduction of working hours and increase of wages raised the cost of producing finished cotton fabrics. With the prices of cotton garments increased the volume of buying declined. At the same time it became possible for the Japanese and other competing countries to pay the American tarif and still sell their cotton goods in this country at less than the prices artificially created by the AAA and the NRA.

As a result the demand for the American product declined to such an extent that American textile mills were compelled to reduce production. They laid off men. Many of them closed down completely. Many of were gripped with financial difficulties. Altogether, therefore, a situation was created that easily accounted for a loss of confidence in the whole cotton program of the New Deal, the natural reflection of which was the collapse of the cotton market.

Cotton Importation Leaps.

Representative John W. McCormack [Dem., Mass.] cited the figures which tell the story of the loss of American markets to the Japanese as a result of the increased cost of American textiles. In 1933 there were 1,700,000 square yards of cotton cloth imported from Japan. In 1934 the importation from Japan jumped to 7,700,000 square yards. Last January the importation from Japan was 7 million square yards, almost as much as in the entire year of 1934 and in February the total rose to 12 million square yards. On the single day of March 1 more than 5 million square yards of cotton cloth were entered from Japan, making a total up to that date this year of 24 million square yards.

Unemployment Increasing.

As a result of the curtailment of production attending the decrease in domestic consumption and export unemployment has been increasing in the cotton textile industry for several months. Of the 35,000 workers employed in the export manufacturing and distribution branch alone fully half are now out of jobs.

A similar decrease in consumption occasioned by increased prices of finished products and a consequent loss of jobs by workers has been noted in numerous other industries subject to the manipulations of the AAA and NRA. According to the statistics of the National Industrial Conference board, the low point of unemployment since Mr. Roosevelt launched the New Deal was reached in May, 1934, when 9 million 201 thousand heads of families and single persons were out of work.

The latest available figures, which are for January, 1935, show 10 million 142 thousand unemployed, an increase of nearly 1 million. To such revelations is attributed the waning confidence that the New Deal tinkering with economic law is really succeeding.

LONG CLAIMS CREDIT FOR WORKS MEASURE BY REMOTE CONTROL

Washington, D. C., March 24.—(AP)—Huey Long of Louisiana today modestly took credit for the sudden passage yesterday by the senate of the 4 billion 880 million dollar work relief bill which he fought.

"Filibustering by remote control, I call it," Long said, when asked why he thought he was responsible for the sudden break on the measure which had been before the senate eight weeks.

Long was in Columbia, S. C., making a speech yesterday and sent word to the senate that he was coming by airplane to take part in the debate on the Thomas silver amendment. The senate shortly thereafter passed the bill under pressure by Democratic leaders.

"No, I wasn't surprised to see them rush the relief bill through," Long laughed. "They had spent too much time on it anyway. I just wanted to hustle them along and see how many new things they would stick into it.

"I told them I was going to take an airplane from Columbia, S. C., because I wanted to scare them into action. They acted."

SILK MEN MAKE STRIKE THREAT; VOICE CHARGES

Coal and Auto Walkouts May Be Called.

Washington, D. C., March 23.—(AP)—The United Textile Workers added a silk strike warning today to threats of walkouts next week in two of the nation's great industries, soft coal and automobiles.

Unless the silk mill operators cease from violating their code and last fall's strike settlement, said Francis J. Gorman, textile union vice president, there would be a silk strike, "not because we want it but because we shall have no other recourse."

A committee of Appalachian soft coal operators and United Mine Workers officials have just a week to draw up new wage and hour contracts to avoid a nation-wide bituminous strike.

Not a miner will enter the coal shafts April 1 unless the new contracts have been drawn by that time, John L. Lewis, mine union chief, declares.

Miners Want Increase.

More than a month of negotiations so far have produced little progress toward an agreement. The miners ask a 50 cent increase in their basic daily wage and a cut in hours from 35 to 30. The operators offer renewal of present contracts for one year.

Whether the American Federation of Labor will try to tie up the auto industry in an effort to get rid of the Wolman auto labor board and its policies will be determined at a conference here Thursday.

Francis Dillon, federation organizer in Detroit, is to come here Thursday to report to William Green, federation president, the results of a strike vote recently taken among A. F. of L. employes in the industry.

The labor department's report on silk and rayon wages and hours from April, 1933, to August, 1934, made in accordance with the strike settlement last fall, brought Gorman's statement.

Average Wage Drops.

"Outstanding among these findings is the terrific drop in the average wage, from the former level of a $21 weekly average wage [1925-29] to that of $11.20 in April, 1933, and the relatively slight increases since then," he said.

"Since the making of the investigation upon which the report is based was completed there have been further additions to the work load and further reductions in pay in New England and other silk centers.

"I want to say this: Unless the employers are willing to wait for the findings of the work assignment boards there will be a strike in the silk industry."

SURGEON TO SEE GIRL, 9, SEEKING NEW LEG TODAY

Dr. Paul B. Magnuson, professor of surgery in the medical school of Northwestern university, will make today his first examination of June Garrey, 9 years old, of Rapid City, S. D., who arrived in Chicago on Saturday night hopeful that surgeons may enable her to walk for the first time.

If the results of the examination are favorable Dr. Magnuson expects to try a delicate bone grafting operation. June was born with an incomplete thigh bone in her left leg. The operation will consist of removing the smaller bone [the fibula] from the lower leg and grafting it into the upper leg as a substitute missing portion of the femur.

COURTNEY DEFIES ASSASSINS; WILL WAR UPON GANGS

Suspects Capone Gunmen of Firing on Him.

when we got to that corner we couldn't tell which of a half dozen cars was the one we wanted.

"We cruised around for a while, trying to get sight of the car. Then I went home and told my wife so she wouldn't be alarmed at hearing radio reports about the shooting. I called Capt. Gilbert and we went to the detective bureau. Then we went to 5 o'clock mass at the Holy Name cathedral."

Sees Outline of Assailant.

"Did you see the man shooting?" Mr. Courtney was asked. He said he had a good look at the outline of the man doing the shooting, who was wearing a greenish gabardine overcoat. The policeman in the front seat, he added, had a better opportunity to see the gunmen.

The first shot missed the car altogether, he related. The second hit a metal support on the ventilator alongside Perry and was deflected. Two other bullets hit the left rear door of the state's attorney's automobile. These were fired, he recalled, while the other car was abreast of his.

The gunmen fired more shots as their machine speeded up and passed Courtney's car, he recounted. The last two shots missed altogether. Five bullets in all struck it. Later police found eight empty shells of a heavy automatic pistol in the street.

Refuses to Make Suspicions Explicit.

Courtney evaded questions as to his suspicions, particularly those that referred to his activities against outlaw teamsters' unions—those unions not affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, but which are grouped in an independent organization.

On request, he consulted his records and found that approximately 4,000 persons had been sent to the penitentiary since he took office in Dec., 1932.

"We broke up several arson rings, putting more than fifty persons in prison," he answered to inquiries about his administration. "We had ten kidnaping convictions, breaking up the Roger Touhy and Jack Klutas gangs."

It was recalled that he had kept up a campaign for more than a year on automobile thefts, reducing them to but a few a day where formerly the daily average was more than 90 stolen cars. As a result of his drive he obtained two reductions from insurance companies in rates for car theft insurance.

The prosecutor was asked if he thought his action in joining with Mayor Kelly in suppressing gambling was responsible for the attempt on his life. In former days the Capone syndicate ruled all gambling here and even after the departure of Al Capone for federal prison the "mob" had a hold on this "racket."

Scoffs at "Petty Larceny" Killer.

"It wasn't gambling," Mr. Courtney said, "and it wasn't any petty larceny group that sought my life. No, I don't think it could have been a couple of drunken teamsters who happened to see me and decided to take a shot at me. It was the mob. You can figure that out for yourselves as I'm going to say no more about it."

Police said that the Capone gangsters are still strong in several unions and that Courtney has been waging a continuous warfare to oust them. The one union against which Courtney has had considerable warfare is a branch of the coal teamsters' union, whose officials he ousted, and who sought to hamper him by injunctions and a petition to have a special state's attorney appointed.

But, whatever Courtney had in his mind, he made no move last night that could be taken as indicative of what might follow. Gilbert, Sullivan, and Kelly went to their homes, saying no arrests were imminent. Courtney said he would spend the night at home and be ready for renewal of his warfare today. He added that he would take only his usual precautions against being shot.

MAYOR URGES PUBLIC TO BACK COURTNEY IN WAR ON GANGDOM

Mayor Kelly besought yesterday "in the name of Chicago, the active aid of all good citizens in ending forever such outrages" as the attempt early in the day to assassinate State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney.

"When rats are cornered," the mayor declared, "they will fight in the only way they know how to fight. These gunmen, who have been trying to convert honest labor unions into rackets of the most vicious sort, are cornered now and know that they will be stamped out by fearless, vigorous prosecution that cannot be stopped even by terrorism. This attack on Mr. Courtney will have no effect except to cause him to redouble the energy he is putting into this fight.

"As mayor of the city I have assured Mr. Courtney that we will continue to give him the same complete coöperation that we always have given him. That coöperation is bringing results and more results will follow this cowardly attempt on his life.

"Our effort will be not only to punish the men who did the actual shooting but to punish just as drastically the men behind the attempt at murder, the men who planned it, who may have used mere tools in their bloody work."

SOUTHWEST GETS DUST RELIEF IN SCATTERED RAIN

Colorado Will Check Germs in Clouds.

Kansas City, Mo., March 24.—(AP)—Reviving rains fringed the parched southwestern plains country today, bringing some relief from smothering dust storms that have harrassed inhabitants and livestock and retarded crops.

The greater part of the drouth area, however—the mountain plateaus—received no moisture. The relieving rains were accompanied in many sections by destructive hailstorms, cloudbursts and electrical displays. Three persons were killed in Oklahoma, where skies were clearing today.

The downfall ranged from light showers on the eastern edge of the southern plains to downpours farther east in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas.

Hunt Germs in Air.

Controversy as to whether a series of pneumonia deaths were attributable directly to the dust led the Colorado board of health to send out a National Guard airplane into the southeastern corner of the state today to take cultures up to two mile altitudes. Germ culture plates were to be exposed at successive 1,000 foot levels in the dust-laden skies.

Killed by Lightning.

Tom Hall, of Mannford, Okla., and George Hiebert, Cordell, Okla., were killed by lightning. Robert Gott, army private at Fort Sill, Okla., drowned when trying to cross swollen Cache creek on horseback.

A cloudburst at Kiefer, Okla., undermined the tracks of the St. Louis and San Francisco railroad, derailing a freight train with the resultant burning of five cars of gasoline. A wall of water swept into Kiefer and flooded the lower floors of buildings.

The rains extended northward as far as Dodge City, Kas. The major part of the dry area in New Mexico, Colorado, Kansas, Nebraska, Wyoming and the Dakotas, received no relief.

Charges of Electricity.

Beaver, Okla., March 24.—(AP)—Intense charges of static electricity accompanying dust storms of the western plains present an interesting study to those scientists seeking a means of controling soil erosion by wind.

The static accumulates in charges of sufficient force to shock persons who touch metal, stop motor cars, and cause human hair to stand on end in wild disarray.

The theory has been offered that the electricity kills wheat and other crops by sterilizing the soil and thus preventing germination.

Motorists traveling across the plains during a sand storm learned long ago to ground their motors with wire to carry off the charge after static has stopped them.

DEMOCRACY OUT; CUBA NOT SURE WHAT ITS RULE IS

It's a Brand New System, Observers Agree.

HAVANA, March 24.—(AP)—Cuba, the island of quick changing governments, is trying a brand new system. Political scientists may be able to classify it, but few Cubans have been able to name it.

"It's not a democracy," leading legal lights of the island admit, "yet it's not a dictatorship." A state of "social decomposition" is what Manuel Despaigne, pessimistic secretary of the treasury, called it today.

To the neutral observer it appears to be something half way between a military dictatorship and a civilian dictatorship backed by the military. Ordinarily Cuba is a democracy, but democracy has been foreign to the country for many years.

By Decree and Edict.

Gerardo Machado was the last president elected by the voters. After a four year term beginning in 1924, Machado was elected again in 1928 for six years. The methods used in the 1928 election have long been criticized and few Cubans believe they had anything but a dictatorship during his last year in office, 1933.

The latest system, born of the general strike-revolutionary movement of early March, has none of the characteristics of a democracy. There is no constitution and no congress. Governing is done by civilian decree and military edict.

The seat of the civilian government remains in the palace where President Carlos Mendieta meets with his cabinet and council of state.

Two Sets of Courts.

Two sets of courts are functioning throughout the island—the regular civil courts and military councils of war. In most cases of breach of public order, the cases are heard before councils of war composed entirely of army and navy officers. In some cases, however, the defendant is given a hearing in civil courts. No one knows why the distinction is made.

Whatever the form, many Cubans believe the present setup is stronger than anything Cuba has ever seen. With the army and navy at his side, President Mendieta has been able to weather a whirlwind of opposition activity and he probably will remain solid until his successor is named in the general elections this summer.

Mounted Policeman Patrols Brookfield Zoo Woods Area

JAPS SPEAK FOR SOVIET HALF OF SAKHALIN ISLAND

Want to Buy Oil Fields and Forest Areas.

TOKIO, March 24.—(AP)—Japan "ardently desires" to purchase the northern half of the Pacific island of Sakhalin from soviet Russia because of its promising oil fields and forest areas, Foreign Minister Koki Hirota told the diet today.

Previously at the same session Hirota had outlined the negotiations, which culminated yesterday, for the purchase of another valuable soviet possession, the Chinese Eastern railway, for $40,000,000.

Hirota was speaking before a committee of the house of representatives debating a government bill for control of fisheries in northern waters.

Discussed in 1923.

He said an offer to sell the Russian portion of the island had been discussed by the late soviet statesman, Adolf Abramowics Joffe, when the latter visited Japan in 1923 in an abortive attempt to restore Russo-Japanese relations. He added, however, that this discussion was not at the initiative of Moscow.

"Because of differences over the price," Hirota explained, "the proposal fell through. Whether the U. S. S. R. still has intentions to sell I do not know, but Japan ardently desires that a time will come when she will be able to purchase this territory, thereby removing a source of diplomatic disputes between Japan and Russia."

He said in event of such a transfer Japan would actively undertake the economic development of North Sakhalin, with its oil fields and extensive forests.

Once All Russian.

The island was entirely Russian until the Portsmouth treaty of 1905 ceded the southern half of Japan. After the bolshevik revolution the Japanese army held the northern half until Tokio recognized the soviet government and concluded the 1925 settlement.

During their occupation the Japanese discovered rich oil potentialities, especially in the Oha region, and the 1925 settlement granted an 11 year concession to Japan for the purpose of drilling wells in certain areas. This concession, expiring in 1936, was allotted to the Japanese semi-official North Sakhalin Petroleum company, which is now negotiating with Moscow seeking an extension.

Because of difficulties being raised by the Russians, the Japanese are worried lest the soviet withdraw this valuable source of petroleum from Japan's control. The Japanese navy buys and stores most of the North Sakhalin oil output.

70,000 PROTEST AGAINST RELIEF ACT IN GLASGOW

GLASGOW, March 24.—(AP)—Seventy thousand persons, many women and children among them, shouting "Down with the king!" marched to Glasgow Green today waving red banners and flags in the largest demonstration against the unemployment act this city has seen.

"Down with the national government!" "Down with Ramsay MacDonald and his parasites!" they cried.

The shouts, nothing new among communistic elements of Glasgow, were the nearest approach to disorder. The demonstration took place under the eyes of 1,000 police.

Three thousand of the demonstrators came from all parts of Scotland. Many walked to Glasgow. The visitors were accommodated over night in various public halls belonging to the city corporation, which has a Socialist majority. It was the first time in the city's history such a concession had been made. No arrests were made.

HARBIN ROCKED BY 3 EXPLOSIONS AT ARMY ARSENAL

HARBIN, Manchukuo, March 24.—(AP)—Three terrific explosions in an ammunition dump of the Manchukuo army at Gondatievka, a suburb, razed several houses tonight and shattered windows over a wide radius.

As alarm spread through the city, Japanese military forces promptly placed a cordon around the district, effectually preventing outside knowledge of the extent of casualties and damage.

Japanese news agencies expressed belief many were dead or injured. The explosions continued for seven hours and fire added to the destruction. Windows were broken in Harbin, four miles from the scene, and ceilings collapsed.

The origin of the blast was not known, but Japanese news agencies speculated that unidentified elements displeased with Manchukuo's acquisition from Russia of the Chinese Eastern railway were possibly responsible.

Seeks Divorce

DOROTHY GISH.

Bridgeport, Conn., March 24.—[Special.]—Dorothy Gish, stage and screen star, has instituted divorce proceedings against James Rennie, Broadway actor, in Superior court here, it became known today.

Miss Gish's suit was filed Friday under her marriage name of Dorothy Elizabeth Rennie and thus escaped immediate notice. She charges cruelty from Dec. 26, 1920, the date on which she and Rennie eloped to Greenwich, where they were married by Justice of the Peace Albert S. Meade.

The divorce writ sends forth no details of the complaint. Miss Gish is not asking for alimony or change of name. Whether Mr. Rennie would contest the suit was not known. Miss Gish, who has appeared in several Westport country playhouse productions in the last two seasons under the direction of Lawrence Langner, has a summer home in South Norwalk.

ATTACKS PLAN FOR ABOLITION OF GRAND JURY

Opposition to the abolition of the grand jury as proposed in the new criminal practice code drafted by the Illinois Bar association was voiced yesterday by Thomas Marshall, former assistant state's attorney. Attorney Marshall said that any attempt to scrap the grand jury system would be vigorously opposed both at the state meeting of the Bar association next Saturday in Springfield and in the general assembly.

"The grand jury is more than an accusing agency," Attorney Marshall declared. "It is an agency created to protect the innocent from the unjust accusations of partisan officials. Abolition of the grand jury would be a serious attack upon the liberty of American citizens who have the right to the protection afforded by the grand jury system."

Abolition of the grand jury is among a number of basic changes in criminal law procedure proposed by the Bar association in a draft of a bill to be submitted to its entire membership Saturday.

5 & 10 PRINCESS KEEPS TO CABIN; TOO TALKATIVE

Attorney Radios Her to Be More Silent.

ABOARD S. S. BREMEN, March 24.—(AP)—The former Barbara "Babs" Hutton, bound for home and Reno to divorce Prince Alexis Mdivani, was under orders not to talk today, and decided it would be better to listen to a phonograph in the privacy of her suite than to mix with the other passengers.

The Woolworth five-an-ten cent store heiress has received a wireless from her New York attorney instructing her to issue no more statements until he sees her. The princess' cousin, James Woolworth Donahue, told passengers last night that she was ill and had gone to bed without her dinner, drinking only a cup of black coffee.

Names on Deck Chairs.

The Mdivani party was not on the passenger list, but the names of the heiress and her cousin were on promenade deck chairs. The chairs, however, were secluded at the far end of the upper deck and that reserved for the princess was at the end of the row.

The three chairs next to hers were marked off in the name of Cousin Jimmy, the Broadway playboy, who has accompanied the princess on many trips.

Before boarding the Bremen yesterday at Southampton the heiress expressed her dislike for the well organized charity campaigns in England, in which rich visitors are asked several times for contributions. It was learned the princess eluded these appeals.

She plans to keep her charitable gifts in America.

Never Got Any Rest.

Discussing her English visit, the heiress added:

"I've never been given a minute's rest in this country. Somebody or some organization was always after me.

"Every cent I've given away has been given to American charities. My future contributions likewise will be to American organizations. I intend to continue giving $50,000 annually, and all to America."

Her cousin didn't join in the usual first night out promenade and gatherings in the salon, staying with the heiress in her cabin until she retired. Two maids attended her.

Captures Assailant

Policeman James Kelly of the South Chicago station was passing a tavern at 3066 East 91st street early yesterday when Miss Ruby Geinto, 24 years old, 9028 Houston avenue, ran from the place with three Mexicans pursuing her. When the policeman stopped the three men one of them stabbed him in the abdomen, back, and thigh. The policeman drew his revolver and opened fire. Two of the men escaped, but Kelly captured the third. Nicholas Sanchez, 30 years old, 8901 Buffalo avenue, said he and the others are employed by the Illinois Steel company. At the South Chicago hospital it was said Policeman Kelly's condition was serious.

SLAYER OF GIRL ADMITS KILLING BILLY GAFFNEY

Eastview, N. Y., March 24.—[Special.]—Albert H. Fish, who is to be sentenced to death tomorrow morning for the murder of Grace Budd, told county authorities tonight that he murdered Billy Gaffney, 4 year old Brooklyn boy who disappeared eight years ago.

The oral confession was made after a written confession made by Fish appeared in a New York tabloid which has been publishing the condemned man's memoirs for the last two weeks.

Although authorities were skeptical, an investigation was started.

Fish said he took the Gaffney boy to Wisteria cottage in Greenburg. It was at this cottage where Grace Budd was killed.

Husband Kills His Rival and Self with Shotgun

After killing Carl Nordengren, 40 years old, with a shotgun as he was returning to his apartment at 8025 Exchange avenue yesterday morning, Arthur Stockman, 41 years old, of the same address, shot and killed himself. Both are laborers. Stockman's wife, Jennie, a maid in a loop hotel, said she had been separated from her husband because of his jealousy and that he once had threatened Nordengren because of his attentions to her.

ATTORNEY FINDS HE CAN'T KEEP UP WITH NRA LAWS

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 24.—[Special.]—Five or six thousand obscure individuals in Washington, the identity of most of them hidden from the public, now possess the power to make laws which have the force of an act of congress.

This was the charge of Attorney Gilbert H. Montague, chairman of a committee appointed by the New York State Bar association to investigate the National Industrial Recovery administration. Mr. Montague, a prominent New York attorney, and members of his committee spent several months wandering through the NIRA maze and attempting to find some order amidst the administrative chaos there. He was astounded, he reported to the bar association, by the "bewildering tangle" of overlapping and conflicting codes and jurisdictional disputes uncovered in the NIRA jungle.

"The functionaries who now possess, under NIRA, authority to recommend for routine approval codes, executive orders, interpretations, rules and regulations, each having the force of an act of congress, now aggregate, on a conservative estimate, upwards of five or six thousand persons," he declared.

Personnel Constantly Changes.

"The personnel of these thousands of law-making functionaries under NIRA is constantly changing and their particular identity at any given moment is absolutely unascertainable by any one inside or outside of NRA.

"How to keep track of these codes, orders, interpretations and regulations so that before it is too late one may either comply with them or obtain from NRA an exemption from or modification of them, is fast becoming a major problem of American business men and their legal advisers."

Mr. Montague pointed out that every code, order or regulation issued under the NIRA governed with all the force of an act of congress. And he warned that there was being injected into the situation the further peril of heavy money forfeitures exacted from the bewildered business man who could not hope to keep up with the thousands of rules being published.

Peril of Criminal Penalties.

"Hundreds of business men," Mr. Montague declared, "having complied with every provision of every code that they ever thought applied to them, are now awakening to the unpleasant realization that they are today in peril of criminal penalties, injunction proceedings, damage suits, and heavy money forfeitures for failure to comply with unsuspected provisions of other codes to which they never have paid any attention, because they never have realized that these codes were in any way applicable to them."

The delegation of the powers of the President to thousands of persons under NIRA has led to the possibility of "hole-in-the-corner, coercive, monopolistic, uneconomic, and unevenly enforced executive made laws," the attorney asserted.

He recalled that the attorney general of the United States had obtained indictments under NIRA against four Texas oil producers for violation of an alleged code provision that actually was not in the code. This incident led to the disclosure that 700 codes have been approved, 1,000 executive orders issued, and more than 10,000 administrative orders issued by NRA officials but that no attempt had been made to classify and publish all this mass of new law. It was this revelation that caused the New York state Bar association to appoint a committee to inquire into the situation and make a report which should be called to the attention of congress.

Ten Thousand Pages of Law.

Attorney Montague quoted a similar report on NIRA law making which was compiled by a committee of the American Bar association.

"The total legislative output by this one administrative agency [NIRA] staggers the imagination," said this committee report. "A safe guess would be that the total exceeds 10,000 pages of 'law' in the period of one year. This figure may be compared with the total of 2,735 pages which comprise the total federal statute law as set forth in the code of laws of the United States and the cumulative supplement of 1933.

"When the legislative production of other federal administrative agencies is taken into account, it should not be difficult to demonstrate that the total volume of administrative legislation now in force greatly exceeds the total legislative output of congress since 1789.

"Under these circumstances, not only citizens but even lawyers are helpless in any effort to ascertain the law applicable to a given state of facts. The presumption of knowledge of the law becomes, to term it mildly, more than violent."

WAGE EARNERS IN 600,000 N. Y. FAMILIES IDLE

La Guardia Report Cites Rising Relief Costs.

New York, March 24.—[Special.]—There still are approximately 660,000 families, about 37 per cent of New York city's population, with unemployed wage earners, and as unemployment continues the number of families forced on the relief rolls must constantly increase, according to the report of the mayor's committee on unemployment relief, the first installment of which was made public today.

On the basis of a sample census made by the Russell Sage foundation, the committee estimated there were approximately one million unemployed in the city in March, 1934. State labor department indices show that "there has been no change in the situation," according to the report.

341,451 on Work Relief.

"On March 1, 1935, there were 341,451 families and single persons in New York city on the work and home relief rolls," the report says. "These figures indicate that approximately one-half of the unemployed are receiving public relief at the present time.

"It is important to recognize that approximately 325,000 families in which the wage earners are unemployed are not on relief, but constitute a reservoir from which a constantly increasing number of families will seek public relief."

The committee concludes that "it is therefore clear that nothing but a substantial increase in the employment of workers by either private industry or public works can save this city from an increasing deluge of families who have been finally rendered destitute by years of enforced idleness."

Relief Costs Mount.

In a survey of relief costs, the committee reported that the steady mounting of relief rolls, "rather than an increase in the generosity of relief standards," is responsible for the increased cost of relief.

"The average cost per family for 1932, excluding both administrative expenses and the cost of materials and supplies, was $51.36 per month, while for 1935 the average cost was $42.15," the report said.

Ecuador's Premier Quits in Row with President

QUITO, Ecuador, March 24.—(AP)—Ecuador faced another government crisis today when Premier Rosendo Santos Alarcon submitted his resignation because of a disagreement with President Velasco Ibarra. Ibarra is expected to return shortly from Ambato.

(President Velasco Ibarra defied efforts of congress last fall to depose him after he twice resigned and then reconsidered. He denied charges the government was attempting to establish a dictatorship.)

DOLE RECEIVERS SCORN CHANCES TO EARN LIVING

New York, March 24.—[Special.]—Sherwood A. Munson, a young accountant of Jersey City, disagreed sharply today with Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt over the question of dole versus job. He produced more than 300 letters to prove his contention that the unemployed would rather accept public relief payments than work for a living.

"I advertised recently for a poor friend of mine," said Mr. Munson, "and within a week I received more than 280 letters. The rest have come in since then. My friend got a job. His brother took another, and, would you believe it, I offered the remainder to various relief agencies but I got the horse laugh."

Mr. Munson said relief agencies could not induce any one to accept a job.

How You Can Turn Your Careful Driving into Money

A car insurance plan in which dangerous drivers cannot participate

LIBERTY MUTUAL'S car insurance plan makes your careful driving pay you in dollars and cents, as well as in ease of mind. More than 41 million dollars returned to policyholders—at least 20% annually—is the best proof of that statement.

Here is the plan: Liberty Mutual car insurance is confined to careful drivers. By selecting careful drivers we have fewer accidents. This means we have fewer losses to pay. Furthermore, you do not have to pay a large commission to a salesman. The combined savings under this plan are returned to you, as a policyholder.

If you are a careful driver, you are eligible for a policy in Liberty Mutual. But if you are a reckless, dangerous driver, you are no more welcome here than you are on the road.

Why not find out if you, too, can save money on your car insurance? Take the first step now. Send for the free money-saving booklet below. We will furnish you the facts promptly and then you and we can decide if we belong together. There is no obligation on you or on us.

HANDS . . . FEET . . . AND HEAD. The careful driver uses them all, especially his head. And part of his headwork is to see to it that his careful driving makes his car insurance cost less. He does this by insuring with Liberty Mutual, the company that selects only careful drivers; has fewer accidents; has fewer losses to pay, and returns the savings under this plan to policyholders. Even a careful driver can be the victim of the other fellow's recklessness. But the driver whom Liberty Mutual accepts is protected, whatever happens.

RECKLESS DRIVERS NEED NOT APPLY

He got away with it—every time but this. Now in a split second this reckless driver is faced with financial loss, and worse. Reckless drivers cannot have the protection that Liberty Mutual car insurance gives. They are barred from this select group of the country's most careful drivers, who make their careful driving pay dividends.

If you live in or near CHICAGO

—and if you are a careful driver, we invite you to place your car insurance with us. Leading men here are in our company. We would like to have another 1,000 policyholders. Our plan is —careful selection of careful drivers. By that means we have been able to keep accidents down. This means fewer claims to pay and lower costs to you. The resultant savings are returned to you as a policyholder. Why not find out if you, too, can save money on your car insurance? Clip the coupon for the free money-saving booklet below. It tells how easy it is to handle your insurance through Liberty Mutual. No bother. No red tape. Mail the coupon today.

CHICAGO AS A CONQUERED PROVINCE.

Income tax collections in the Chicago district this month are 9 million dollars larger than they were a year ago. This is taken to mean that the federal treasury is going to suck some 25 million dollars more out of Chicago this year than it did in 1934. Among the jobholders here and in Washington there is great rejoicing.

The individuals who must pay the taxes may be pardoned for failing to share in the jubilation. What the federal government is taking out of Chicago is an important part of the annual saving of the people of Chicago and its vicinity. The money is no longer available for investment in business and industry in this territory and therefore can provide no regular employment to those now out of work. It cannot be put in the bank to meet the emergency needs of the people who earned it and it cannot pay insurance premiums which would provide for dependents. The money is gone for good. The community which has paid it is poorer in terms of present purchasing power and future wealth.

Despite the enormous tribute which is being wrung year after year from the people of Chicago, the federal burocrats take the position that they are doing a great kindness to the community in paying part of the cost of relieving its economic distress. The truth is that we are paying all that is being spent for our own poor and a large part of the cost of relieving distress in other states as well. Having taken our money, the tax eaters expect us to be grateful when some part of it is returned to us. They have made it impossible for us to support our poor from local taxation and then upbraid us for neglecting our humane duty. They resent being obliged to return any part of the tribute exacted. They would prefer to spend it all on idiotic public works of the order of the Fort Peck dam.

Any Chicagoan who can rejoice at the increase in federal income tax collections in this district would find satisfaction in a rising death rate and well-filled orphan asylums.

THE MISCALLED CHILD LABOR AMENDMENT.

Although the President and other architects of the New Deal have repeatedly declared that one of its most prized accomplishments has been the abolition of child labor, a "child labor" amendment to the federal constitution has their blessing and has, in fact, been ratified up to this time by a score or more of states.

The strength of the proposed amendment is in the assumption that the labor of children is a widespread evil which can only be suppressed by the federal authority. If this were true there would be no respectable opposition to granting the federal government appropriate authority to deal with the situation. But the assumption is fallacious. Child labor in the sense appealing to all decent people—that is, the employment of children in labor destructive of their health and morals, as in mines, factories, sweatshops, and under any conditions physically or morally injurious—continues in only a few places, and where it survives it is entirely within the authority and ability of the police power of a state government to restrain or abolish it. It has been asserted in the senate without denial that "every state of the Union has legislated for the regulation of child labor and protection of young children, although these regulations differ according to local climate, conditions, standards, experiences, and resources."

If these regulations are not effective the proper method of correction is through the legislation of the states in accordance with the conditions of the problem. It is not by recourse to the central government, which must impose general standards regardless of these conditions, as in the case of the prohibition amendment.

This is denied by the advocates of federal amendment, on the ground that adequate regulations in one state put it at an economic disadvantage in competition with states which are more lax. Whatever force this theory may have had has been and is being progressively removed by the spread of regulatory legislation by the states. It does not justify the adoption of an amendment greatly increasing the powers and responsibilities of the central government and opening the way to the establishment of a large federal burocracy with power and purpose to clamp down on every community fixed standards which disregard local and individual needs and conditions.

The phraseology of the amendment is: "The congress shall have power to limit, regulate, and prohibit the labor of persons under eighteen years of age." This would affect 45,000,000 persons, including the girl helping with housework in her own home or the boy doing chores on a farm. The Supreme court has held recently that the power to regulate implies full power over the thing regulated, and, as Elihu Root has pointed out, "this amendment would confer upon congress the power to exercise upon the people of any state compulsion as to the way in which they should bring up their children."

Of course, these implications are indignantly denied by the advocates of the amendment, yet every amendment introduced to limit the scope which opponents hold the proposed power covers was voted down in congress at the behest of its advocates, as, for example, limiting the power to labor under 16 in mines, quarries, mills, workshops, factories, and manufacturing plants, or excluding labor for parents on the farm or in the home, and like proposals for qualification. The amendment, in short, is not restricted to the evils which its proponents make so much of but is a sweeping grant of power to a federal burocracy to regulate the lives of all youth up to 18. It is for that reason that men and women and organizations of unimpeachable character are opposing this vast grant of power to the federal government, which is, in fact, a long step toward a socialist state.

With no adequate public discussion this miscalled child labor amendment was ratified by the Illinois assembly. It should be reconsidered in the light of its real character and the ratification repealed.

AMERICAN MORALE.

Dr. Bernard C. Clausen, pastor of the First Baptist church of Pittsburgh, spoke some words of timely significance at the Sunday Evening club. He is of opinion that the world needs more believers and fewer belittlers and that we are in "a tailspin of morale," produced perhaps by the war "with its organized disdain" and the depression with its rigid limitation of resource. The Freudian psychology of the subconscious, he avers, has been "twisted into the brutal suspicion that if we could only sense what people were thinking about we should know what rats they were. Critics today insist that as a matter of fact their neighbors are crooks, liars and fools."

Whatever the cause or causes, there has been a marked and most damaging invasion of the normal confident and kindly American morale by influences which create hasty and sweeping condemnations, rancor, suspicion, and mean envy. In short, a belittlement of American achievement, of American men of note, of American standards and ideals.

This belittlement has been the background or foundation of the charge that the American order has failed. Americans have been proud of their country and of their institutions. They have had confidence in themselves and in one another and they have been loyal to the fundamental political faith on which the American system was founded—namely, that human progress is best assured through liberty. To induce the acceptance of a new system which puts the political state above the individual, extending its authority and responsibilities far and wide over the activities of the individual, the American people have been invited to believe they have been and are victims of sinister forces directed by a few powerful and ruthless conspirators, pitiless in the pursuit of riches, callous to injustice and suffering. This means in effect that the American people has lacked and lacks the intelligence and good character essential to the success of free institutions and therefore must confide the management of its affairs to government; that is, to politicians and burocrats.

The misfortunes of the depression in which every one has shared have been exploited by unscrupulous exaggeration, by reckless condemnation of individuals and of the private enterprise which, the present reaction notwithstanding, has created a general material well-being beyond that of any other people. Dr. Clausen has given the essence of the spirit which has been fomented in this country on a scale never experienced before when he said that "critics today insist that as a matter of fact their neighbors are crooks, liars, and fools."

The savage tirades of the archdemagogs who have sprung up in this situation are the ripe fruit of a campaign of belittlement carried on under the guise of revolutionary reform and restrained only when its dangerous political and economic consequences began to be revealed. It has produced, in Dr. Clausen's vivid phrase, a tailspin of morale. It has poisoned the minds of millions of our people and delivered them into the hands of the quack, the panacea monger, and the demagog.

ANOTHER LOTTERY.

The lower house of the Maine legislature has passed a bill providing a state lottery to finance old age pensions. The action parallels proposals which have been made in a number of other states. In Maine the state senate is expected to defeat the measure, but the fact is significant that presumably level headed New Englanders should be brought to consider seriously what has always been the final resort of frenzied governmental finance. It is a disquieting symptom, albeit a most natural one, of the widespread infection of the states brought to the verge of bankruptcy by the profligate policies of the Roosevelt administration.

Editorial of the Day

JUST A SUGGESTION.

[Des Moines Tribune.]

Now that the state general assembly has disposed of the veterans' bonus, the alcohol blended gasoline proposal, and the new tariffs on agricultural products, here are a few other matters to which it might just about as profitably turn its attention:

1. Settlement of the rebellion in Greece.
2. Determination of the relative rankings in history of Gen. Johnson, Father Coughlin, and Huey Long.
3. Obtain the resignation of Reichsbishop Mueller of Germany.
4. Draft a treaty to end the Chaco war.
5. Ban Japanese "reservists" from California.
6. Build the Nicaraguan canal.
7. Adopt the Dionnes.

And in the between times it might perhaps find the opportunity, without slighting these more important affairs, to do a little something about the 1935 legislative program for Iowa.

DO COME OVER.

Two strangers got into conversation in a railway compartment.

"I'm a banker," explained one.

"I am a music hall artist," remarked the other.

"Ah," said the banker. "I haven't been in a music hall for 20 years."

"And I haven't been in a bank for quite as long as that," said the artist sadly.—Pearsons.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

Here to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

THE GENTLE PACIFISTS tell us in thunderous tones that war is an awful thing. It is. But life's an awful thing when you come right down to brass tacks. William Tecumseh Sherman, who did his darndest to make it that way, said: "War is hell! Has anybody got another match?" He should have lived in our day and generation and had to pay income tax, and sales tax, and real estate taxes, and personal property taxes, and gasoline taxes, and automobile taxes, and special assessment taxes, and watch groceries and steaks and lamb chops and spareribs go soaring up like a skyrocket, to say nothing of shoes and pants and silk stockings, and he would have said: "War is hell, but peace is heller. This match has gone out; gimme a boxful o' 'em."

THE NEW STYLES for women's spring hats have a diaphanous brim and you can see the gals' eyes right through 'em. And by George! they've got two eyes; yessir, two eyes; see 'em, count 'em. The hats they've been wearing all winter, pulled way down over one eye, gave them a sort of Cyclops appearance. I got so used to seeing one eyed girls on the Boul Mich that after a while I got to believing that they only had one eye. But shucks! Thanks to the new spring hats, it's going to be fashionable for the gals to have two eyes again.

GHOST WITH A SECRET.

I met him one night in the shadows,
Where the wind can stir without sound,
He paused and I asked him the question:
"What secret in Death have you found?"
He spoke, but his voice was wordless,
For the lips on the face of the dead
Are sealed by the brand of silence—
But still I recall what he said:
"I climbed the gold ladder of living,
And clung at the slippery bars;
But the nearer I came to the summit,
The farther I was from the stars.
On my lips was the urge of the questing,
In my heart lived the horror of Death—
And one was my sight and my hearing,
The other my hunger and breath.
"What I found at the end of the journey
Is a secret which I dare not tell—
For those who would strive to reach Heaven,
Must first climb their way out of Hell!"

WE WERE VERY EXULTANT when we grabbed the great ship Leviathan away from Germany. But the darned thing has already cost us twenty-two million dollars and the government is willing to sell it for three dollars and a quarter or trade it for a 1910 model flivver or a good coon dog or what have you? And from the interior of Holland, where Mr. Bill Hohenzollern, former war lord of Germany, is chopping wood, there comes a peculiar sound over the radio which sounds suspiciously like somebody laughing right merrily.

AND IF MY FATHER was a cook in London I would sue Rudyard Kipling if he didn't change that line in the poem: "Dukes' sons, cooks' sons, son of a thousand earls . . ." Mr. Kipling has no right to class the son of a first class, respectable cook with dukes or their sons. Cooks' sons has their feelin's!

AND YOU ASK why women don't take more interest in politics and run for public office oftener than they do? Yeah! and in last Saturday's newspapers all over this great broad land was this caption on a Washington story: "Congresswoman Greenway of Arizona Observes Forty-ninth Birthday." That's why. Pass a law that all women elected to public office shall never be considered in the press to be over 18 years old and the women will jump right in and run for congress and President and everything else. There ought to be a law. Write to your congressman today.

NOW THE JAPS are all het up over the Darwin theory and they're threatening to pass a law solemnly refuting the idea that they descended from monkeys. The thing will probably wind up in the Japs' finding evidence that the Chinese started the story and their calling on China for an apology and a billion dollars' indemnity. No matter what disturbs the Japs they can always blame it on the Chinese.

THE DUKE of Manchester is in court again, this time charged with pawning jewels that didn't belong to him. It's hard sledding for dukes these days. That story about the Duke of Manchester, whether true or not, is going to make me a little careful about hiring one again to wash my car. I'd be afraid he'd pawn the radiator.

OBLIVION.

If I could know that I would write
One song that would outlive the years,
Then all the shadows of the night,
And all the day's unavailing tears
Would be avenged. But I, alas!
Can sing of little things alone—
And haltingly. The hours will pass,
And Death will mark me for his own;
And all my little songs will be Forgotten with the rest of me!

TUBERCULOSIS AND REST.

TUBERCULOSIS is curable; in fact, it is the most curable of all our chronic diseases. Years ago we thought of tuberculosis as a sentence of death. Today the picture has entirely changed and we regard the disease as an unfortunate occurrence but with a hopeful outlook. There is just one rule that will insure recovery and that is: "Go to bed and stay there." Rest and food constitute the open sesame to the restoration of health.

We may well ask, "What is meant by rest?" Does it mean lying down most of the time; wandering about the room at will when one gets tired of the reclining posture; going to the bathroom, and sitting up for meals? Not at all. It means just what it says—absolute rest in bed for 24 hours of each day. Only when recovery is well along may permission be given to visit the bathroom. Rest means not only inactive muscles, but a slowing down of the heart action and of respiration. When we are active we breathe more times per minute, more blood is pumped through the circulation, and hence we increase our fuel (food) needs. Rest for the tuberculous patient means complete relaxation of muscles with so little activity that good food is utilized in piling up body reserves needed in neutralizing the toxemia produced by the disease.

In many instances the presence of the disease is detected before both lungs become involved. If the left lung is diseased, lying on the left side for a good part of the time will give that lung more rest and thus promote healing.

Fatigue is the opposite of rest, and anything that tires the patient defeats the objective. Sometimes talking, visiting, reading, or writing letters will prove tiresome. Physicians have observed in many cases that reading for even half an hour will appreciably tire the patient. This may be detected by a slight rise in temperature or by an accelerated pulse rate.

Food is the second most important curative factor. Toxemia due to the disease destroys appetite. As rest reduces the toxemia the appetite will improve and within a few weeks the patient will be eating normally. Tonics to whip up an appetite are not needed; in fact, they should never be used, although preparing the food in an attractive manner will help.

The patient should be instructed to eat only at meal time and then not more than the appetite dictates. We may stuff a goose with food in order to develop a fatty liver, but the procedure must not be followed in human beings. The heaviest meal should be eaten in the middle of the day. Vitamins are important in the diet, particularly those that have to do with the utilization of calcium. The healing process in tuberculosis depends upon an adequate supply of calcium in the blood. Therefore both vitamins A and D must be present in adequate amounts.

The noon meal should be followed by a period of absolute quiet. The quarters should be as silent as possible and the curtains drawn. Even though the patient does not sleep, relaxation should be practiced.

Tuberculous individuals are often difficult to manage and they must learn to surrender utterly to a set program. Each one must say to himself, "My physician is in command." Although all cases of tuberculosis are caused by the same organism, namely, the tubercle bacillus, yet in no two of a thousand people will the manifestations of the disease be identical. You are yourself; another patient is quite a different individual and you may react in one way and he in another.

Early diagnosis, early bed rest, and good management will insure recovery. Carelessness on the part of the patient, failure to follow directions, or an uninterested or unintelligent physician may mean a prolonged, serious, or even fatal illness. The duration of the period in bed may be six months, a year, or longer.

TANNIC ACID.

FLYING STORIES

By Test Pilot Jim Collins

BACK SEAT FALS.

Back seat driving is taboo in the ethics of the flying game. But occasionally you get two pilots together in the same cockpit.

Two pilots were flying a pretty heavily loaded bomber on a cross-country trip one time. They were both fast friends and both equally good pilots. Maybe that's why the thing happened as it did.

They landed at Love field, Tex., gassed up, and taxied out to take off again. Part of the field was torn up. They didn't have any more field than just enough from where they began their takeoff.

Their heavily loaded ship, with its two Liberty motors, its acres of wings and its forest of struts, started lumbering down the field. The pilot who was flying the ship used most of the space in front of his obstacles before he got the ship off the ground. He did a nice job after he got it off the ground by not climbing it more than just enough to clear the wires which were in front of him. He figured he was just going to clear them nicely when apparently the other pilot, sitting alongside him in the other cockpit, figured he wasn't, although why the other pilot did what he did at that second I could never figure out, except that it was one of those dumb things that we are all apt to do under duress if we don't watch ourselves.

Anyway, both motors suddenly quit cold and the ship smacked into the wires and piled up in a heap on the far side of the road across the airport.

Both pilots came out of the wreck running. The one who had been flying the ship had the wheel, which evidently had broken off in the crash, raised above his head in his right hand. He was brandishing it wildly, running after the other pilot and shouting at the top of his voice, "Cut my switches, will you! Cut my switches just when I was going to make it! If I ever catch you I'll cut your throat!"

FOR CRIPPLED CHILDREN.

Chicago, March 20.—I have read the letter of Mrs. Irene McLaughlin which was published in the Voice of the People March 20. In reply I have listed the institutions which provide out-patient clinic or out-patient clinic and hospital care for crippled children regardless of their ability to pay.

In most of the institutions here listed the crippled child who is entirely without funds and for whom some agency does not provide the brace or other special apparatus which may be needed is given every type of care recommended by the doctors in charge, through the institution. Each of the clinics here listed has on its staf one or more orthopedic surgeons who are trained in the care of crippled children. These patients are seen first in the out-patient clinic and, although the endowment beds available are usually greatly in demand, if the child needs emergency hospital care he can be admitted at once.

If the condition is not of an emergency nature, but does require hospitalization for treatment, he will be put on a waiting list and as soon as a bed is available he will be hospitalized and, regardless of the fact that he may be the child of a family that is entirely without funds, he will receive every attention and care which the condition indicates, including operations, cast, and braces, and convalescent care for as long a period of time as seems to be advisable. Most institutions limit their patients to certain age groups, but children up to and including 13 years of age are accepted by practically all of the hospitals and clinics mentioned here and in a few of them the age is to and including 14 years.

There are other clinics in the city where a crippled child can be seen regardless of his ability to pay but where hospitalization can only be arranged provided the patient is from a family that is on relief. In such instances part of the actual cost of hospital care is borne by one of the relief organizations.

The institutions referred to in the first paragraph are:

Central Free dispensary, 1758 West Harrison street.

Children's Memorial hospital, 707 Fullerton avenue.

Evanston hospital, 2650 Ridge avenue, Evanston.

Home for Destitute Crippled Children, 1653 Maypole avenue.

Provident hospital, 426 East 51st street.

St. Luke's hospital, 1439 South Michigan boulevard.

Shriners' hospital, 2211 North Oak Park avenue.

University of Chicago clinics, 950 East 59th street.

Chicago probably is better provided with facilities for the care of crippled children than any other city in the country. Although about 95 per cent of the approximately 10,000 crippled children in the city of Chicago are financially unable to pay for any part of the care necessary for their rehabilitation, there is no reason why any child should have difficulty in gaining admission to one of the institutions listed here for which interested and sympathetic groups of our citizens have provided endowment funds or direct gifts for their care.

EDWARD L. COMPERE, M. D.,
Secretary, Chicago Orthopedic Society.

HE SCENTS A PLOT.

Chicago, March 21.—It is just possible that somewhere there may exist a surgeon who has not heard of the anti-medical activities of Mrs. McLaughlin and who might be entrapped by her innocent looking letter.

In fairness to the medical profession it should be pointed out that there are regular ways, known to every well informed citizen, of obtaining medical care for crippled children whose parents cannot pay for medical service. It is not necessary to advertise for aid in the way Mrs. McLaughlin has chosen. She has simply exposed to the most unwelcome publicity any surgeon who comes to her aid in this matter. The nature of the publicity he may receive is suggested by Mrs. McLaughlin's remarks (made verbally before at least one large audience and printed in at least two anti-vivisectionist papers) about her experience at Michael Reese hospital.

In the present case she intimates that some doctor quoted her a price of $188. If my estimate of the cost of running "Orphans of the Storm" is near the truth, Mrs. McLaughlin and her associates spend this much money every fifteen days—on dogs.

FREDERIC T. JUNG.

GENEROUS PORTION OF GALL.

Chicago, March 20.—It would seem to require a generous portion of old fashioned gall for a person who spends much time and seemingly limitless funds in fighting the medical profession to turn around and request free service for her friends. C. W. E.

SPEAKING OF REGISTRATION.

Chicago, March 19.—There are laws in several states, and a law proposed in Illinois, to compel the registration of automobile owners and automobile drivers. Why stop there? The automobile owners and drivers constitute practically the cream of our population, the best in economic, moral, and political qualities. Why stop there? Why not register all those who do not own automobiles and drive them, including the half-wits, the lunatic fringe, and the criminally inclined? ARTHUR LAMPERT.

THE AGE OF SPEED.

Aurora, Ill., March 18.—I boarded a United Air Lines plane leaving New York at 9 o'clock this morning and the stewardess handed me a this morning's TRIBUNE. I said to her, "This can't be this morning's TRIBUNE," and she replied, "Yes, it is; it's their midnight edition which left Chicago at 1:30 a. m. and reached here at 6:30 New York time. It has been at the airport here several hours waiting to be delivered to you." BERT F. WAMSLEY.

THE CENTRAL AIRPORT.

Chicago, March 22.—What has become of the campaign for a central airport? Four and a half hours to Jersey City and a half hour to New York—but a full hour to the suburban airport of Chicago. I will! Rats. J. SUTTON.

HEART BALM AND THE CONSTITUTION.

Chicago, March 21.—I notice from the press that our legislature in Springfield either passed or is about to pass a law abolishing right of actions for alienation of affection and breach of promise to marry. Such actions were permitted under the common law.

The federal and state constitutions guarantee every individual a remedy for a wrong. Actions for breach of promise are nothing more than a breach of a civil contract, and the legislature constitutionally has no more right to take away such remedies than it would have in passing a law taking away the rights from a physician or lawyer to sue for their services. The legislature may enact laws regulating marriages and divorces, which are based on public policy, but not where actions are purely civil in their nature. The legislature has no power or right to deprive citizens of their remedies.

If it can withdraw or abolish such remedies by legislation in one instance it may abolish other remedies, such as actions for damages by automobile, railroads, etc. WILLIAM CRONES.

A MIRAGE.

Winnetka, Ill., March 18.—Your paper this morning reports that exceptionally clear atmospheric conditions yesterday "brought the Michigan shore line, sixty miles across the lake, into view from the Tribune Tower and other tall buildings along Michigan avenue."

However convincing optically, such a circumstance is not mathematically possible. From an elevation of 480 feet, the approximate height of the Tribune Tower, the distance of visibility, according to table 6 of Bowditch's American Practical Navigator, is 28.9 miles. In order to see a horizon sixty miles distant the observer would need to be some 2,100 feet up—far higher than any structure in Chicago.

What the eye saw yesterday was very likely a mirage, a phenomenon not unknown to Lake Michigan.

ALL SHADES OF OPINION.

Chicago, March 18.—The phrase Voice of the People is a misnomer so long as you continue to deny freedom of speech and press in that column to those critical of THE TRIBUNE ideology. THE TRIBUNE'S right to champion freedom of speech and press would depend upon its permitting the expression of all shades of opinion in that column, without discrimination in favor of those in agreement with it. KENNETH N. ANGLEMIRE.

ALIENS ON RELIEF.

Chicago, March 22.—I notice your story saying there are 270,000 aliens on relief in Chicago. There must be several million in America.

In addition to not collecting our war debts, why do we support the vicious indigents of other countries? Judging by the records of our labor department, I suspect it is so as to use them as the spear point of revolution when the time is ripe. AMERICAN CITIZEN.

WARNS FARMERS HOW TO BATTLE CHINCH BUG ARMY

Entomologist Gives Data on Coming Invasion.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Farmers who are planning to plant tomatoes between fields of crops to halt the onrush of chinch bugs this summer will be disappointed, warns W. P. Flint, entomologist of the State Natural History survey and the Illinois Agricultural Experiment station at Urbana.

In discussing the tomato planting plan of farmers in Vermillion county, Illinois, Mr. Flint said tomatoes were known to be resistant to the attacks of the bugs. He added, however, that the bugs will not attack the tomato plants, but merely march through a tomato patch on their way to a field of wheat, oats, barley, rye or corn. The same is true of soy beans, he said. The bugs will not injure the bean plants, but will pass through the patch to reach a field of small grain or corn.

A Serious Crop Menace Again.

Mr. Flint says that if tomatoes are grown they should be used in the place of corn and not with the idea that they will protect the corn.

Chinch bugs are beginning to stir in their winter quarters over most of the infested areas that cover about 70 counties in Illinois, threatening to become a serious menace to corn and small grain crops again this year.

Approximately 14 per cent of the bugs were killed during the winter, according to Mr. Flint, who expects the adult chinch bugs to begin flying as soon as the temperature reaches 70 degrees Fahrenheit and remains there for several consecutive days.

A continuation of the recent wet weather, he said, would aid in destroying many of the bugs and would greatly lessen the damage from the pest this season. The percentage of chinch bugs killed by winter weather is considered fairly high by this authority. He said it is too early for entomologists to predict the size of the chinch bug crop that farmers will have to combat in 1935.

Find Bugs Stirring.

As far north as THE TRIBUNE'S experimental farm near Yorkville in Kendall county men found live chinch bugs last week. A few days ago the manager of the Yorkville farm discovered several active bugs under the bark of a fence post. He estimates that there are fewer bugs to be found this year than last in bunch grass along fence rows and other hibernating places.

News of The Tribune Experimental Farm By Frank Ridgway

Many New Residents.

March 24, 1935.

When I reached the farm yesterday Carl Henderson, manager, and John Rawlings, flock master, were counting noses of the new lamb crop. From 133 ewes, they now have more than 200 lambs, including 70 sets of twins and 63 singles. There are 11 ewes yet to lamb.

Mr. Rawlings admits that he is particularly proud of the 49 superior lambs produced by crossing some of the ewes with Rameses, the famous Corriedale ram brought to the farm last year. These lambs are lighter in color than the others and are easily recognized by the visitors now flocking to the auxiliary farm. The flock master has found the weather ideal for the young lambs during the last few days. On sunny days the older lambs and the ewes roam through the woodland pasture near the sheep fold where the lambs have a chance to gambol on the new green grass.

The tallying of the sheep was stopped long enough for Mr. Rawlings to receive 200 baby chicks—100 Rhode Island Reds and 100 Barred Rocks. They are kept under a comfortable electrically heated brooder.

Out in the Muscovy duck house 45 eggs were counted in the nests today. One of the ducks is sitting on 15 eggs.

The other day Jack Kunde, head of the dairy herd, clipped the long winter coat off the hind quarters of the Guernseys. With electric clippers he sheared the hair close from the point of the hip down under the animal's body and forward in a diagonal direction, freeing both hind legs and tail, excepting the bush, of the old winter coat.

The Northern Illinois Guernsey Breeders' association met at the auxiliary farm dairy last Wednesday. Dairymen from the following farms attended: Grange Meade, St. Charles; St. James, Naperville; Little Orchard, Antioch; Chesem, Dundee; Mill Road, Deerfield; Thorne Hill, Deerfield; Woody Nook, Glen Ellyn; Grey, Roselle; Rock Creek, Plano.

These dairy farmers were interested in the success Mr. Kunde has had this winter in feeding to the Guernsey cows alfalfa hay preserved in the new hay keeper that is being tested at THE TRIBUNE farm near Wheaton. He has enough of the alfalfa hay left in the keeper for this season. One 50 ton silo already has been emptied. Another silo filled with about 75 tons of silage will be opened this week. Silage will be fed this summer to the herd of 40 Guernseys.

Out in the garden yesterday John Wallner, head gardener of the auxiliary farm, tried his new Shetland pony type rotary garden plow. He plowed up only a few strips because the soil is not quite dry enough to work properly. With this new machine Mr. Wallner stirs the garden soil to a depth of several inches after it has been plowed in the ordinary way.

BETTER HOMES DISPLAY DRAWS 1,000 AN HOUR

An average of 1,000 persons an hour viewed Chicago's Better Homes exhibit in the Straus building, 310 South Michigan avenue, yesterday afternoon as the exhibition started its second weeks' showing.

Evidence of city-wide interest in the display sponsored jointly by the Chicago Better Homes committee and the Federal Housing administration, is shown, according to Howard J. White, chairman, in the fact that 40,000 adults attended the exhibit during its initial week.

Today will be "Uptown day," with Manas M. Torcom presiding. Tomorrow will be "Englewood-Auburn Park day," with Henry Peters as chairman.

OFFICIALS HUNT FOR HAY MAN IN OHIO RELIEF QUIZ

Columbus, Ohio, March 24.—[Special.]—Officials continued today to search for John A. Lee, missing ousted hay buyer of the Ohio relief administration and key witness in the fraud and corruption charges before the Franklin county grand jury.

The situation in the relief inquiry, which started as a word battle between Gov. Martin L. Davey and Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins, is at a standstill, but word from Washington indicates the federal government still is investigating new leads in an effort to forward further evidence of fraud and irregularity to Prosecutor Donald Hoskins.

"The grand jury may or may not indict any one," Hoskins said today. "So far we are unable to say definitly what will be done. We cannot go forward until Lee is found. We must discuss the situation with him and I will not recall the grand jury until this has been accomplished."

Dan Duffy, the governor's secretary, has been the only one to testify before the grand jury.

Hoskins had declared earlier that he has not been getting the coöperation needed to expedite the inquiry. His statement came as a protest to action of the federal relief officials in making public an affidavit signed by Lee, baring campaign contributions collected by himself and other relief officials.

HIT-RUN DRIVER KILLS WOMAN.

Maynard, Mass., March 24.—(AP)—A mother of four children was killed and her husband was critically injured today by a hit-and-run driver. The two, Mrs. Anna Kunelius, 49, and her husband, John, 50, were found lying in the road.

FINDS STARS OF PLEIADES MOVE IN OWN ORBITS

Savant Proves an Old Theory.

New York, March 24.—[Special.]—Proof that each star in the Pleiades cluster moves independently of other stars in that group has been established by Prof. Jan Schilt, head of the Columbia university department of astronomy. This contradicts previous observations indicating the Pleiades constitute a star cluster in which motions of individual members are exactly alike.

Prof. Schilt compared recently completed photographs with similar views taken by the same photographic telescope 67 years ago. He and his assistants were able to measure up to 0.0003 of a second of arc per annum the velocities or motions of individual members of the Pleiades with respect to each other.

Although the theory that there is motion among individual stars of the Pleiades and similar groups, has existed for a long time, Prof. Schilt explained, the motion was so slight that its existence has never been proved.

The accuracy of the Columbia calculations, he said, is a result of the long period of time over which the measurements extend.

In making those measurements, he pointed out, the university is carrying forward a project started in 1868 by Lewis Morris Rutherford, founder of the Columbia department of astronomy. He was the first astronomer to prove that positions of stars could be measured more accurately on a photographic plate than by the eye through the ordinary telescope.

BRITAIN'S PEACE ENVOYS SEE NAZI FOREIGN CHIEF

the face of the new German attitude of independence. The French call the Nazi attitude aggression and are trying their hardest to induce Britain to adhere to some sort of policy which would keep Germany in a state of permanent inferiority.

Whether they succeed or not will not be known at least until after the close of the conversations in Berlin.

Berlin is excited over the arrival of the British, who came by plane. Eden took a plane from Paris this morning to join Simon at Amsterdam. The plane carrying the two ministers and a staf of five landed at Tempelhof airfield shortly after 5 o'clock. A crowd of 5,000 Germans was at the airport to cheer them. While the cheers were not like those for Hitler, they were hearty and friendly.

Met by Black Shirt Guard.

As Simon stepped from the plane a magnificently uniformed officer of Hitler's black shirted Schutz Staffel men stepped forward, presented his sword, and said:

"I report the Hitler bodyguard is present."

One hundred black uniformed guards clicked their heels and presented arms. Simon nodded with a smile. Then he stood at attention while the band played "God Save the King," "Deutschland Ueber Alles," and the Horst Wessel song, the Nazi anthem.

The Englishmen were greeted by Foreign Minister van Neurath, Bernard W. von Buelow, veteran German diplomat; Dr. Otto Meissner, Nazi secretary of state representing Hitler, and other officials.

Simon and Eden were driven to the British embassy. Von Neurath accompanied them. At 8:15 o'clock Simon and his party left for the Adlon hotel to dress for dinner, which was held at the embassy. For two and a half hours a great crowd stood on the Wilhelmstrasse and Unter den Linden to welcome the visitors. The vast hall of the Adlon was packed with Germans who also gave the visitors a moderate cheer.

Real Work Begins Today.

The real work begins tomorrow morning when Simon and Eden go to the foreign office to talk with Von Neurath. The British expect to see Hitler in the afternoon. In the evening Von Neurath will be host at an official dinner for the Britons.

On Tuesday Hitler and his cabinet will lunch at the British embassy, after which Simon and Hitler are expected to have a private talk. In the afternoon the Nazi dictator will give a tea party at the Kaiserhof hotel and perhaps a dinner in the evening.

At midnight Eden and a group of experts will leave for Moscow. Simon will return to London by plane Wednesday morning.

The atmosphere in Berlin is one of restrained optimism. Both the British and Germans feel if it depended only on them it would not be hard to reach an agreement, but the Germans fear French sabotage of any peace plan and the British have not yet told them how the French reacted yesterday.

Ambassador Josef Lipski of Poland called on Von Neurath yesterday and expressed his government's views regarding the introduction of military conscription. According to Polish circles the ambassador made clear Warsaw's misgivings as to Hitler's action.

Italy to Send Troops North.

ROME, March 24.—(AP)—Premier Mussolini's war machine, brought to the acme of perfection through years of careful cultivating, revolved dizzily today putting into effect his order of mobilization for the military class of 1911.

Many officers of the war department and the conscription commission were busy getting out notices to 200,000 under call, advising them at what concentration points to report for duty.

Military circles said after concentration is completed this class probably would be moved to northern cities within a reasonable distance of the frontier.

This was not only because the conscription order had in mind the tension over German rearmament, but because southern concentration points were being utilized for embarkation to east Africa. This was also in progress. The S. S. Nazario Suaro left Naples for Africa with 900 workmen, 300 soldiers and war materials today.

Lieut. P. J. Cullen, 54, Fire Department Veteran, Dies

Lieut. Philip J. Cullen of the fire department died yesterday at his home, 2853 Loomis street. He was 54 years old, and had been ill with heart trouble for several months. Lieut. Cullen served on the fire department for 32 years. Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Louise McDonnell Cullen, a son, Philip Jr., and five sisters and a brother. Funeral services will be held Wednesday from the residence to St. Bridget's church, with burial at the Holy Sepulchre cemetery.

St. Paul, Minn., March 24.—(AP) Ralph J. Young, former general manager of the Minnesota-Ontario Pulp and Paper company in International Falls, and former secretary treasurer of the Sperry Realty company of St. Paul, died here Saturday night after a brief illnes. Born in Prescott, Wis., 65 years ago, Mr. Young came to the Twin Cities in 1886. Surviving are his widow and a daughter.

News of the Radio Stations

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

The Midnight Flyers, W-G-N's two hour celebrity night broadcast from the Blackhawk restaurant, will observe its second anniversary on the air tonight with a gala party to which stars of radio, stage and screen have been invited. A slice from an enormous birthday cake will be served to every one present, but radio listeners must content themselves with Pierre Andre's description of this phase of the show.

A special musical program has been planned by Kay Kyser, present maestro at the café. There will be a medley of birthday songs and then Kyser's glee club will sing "Memories" while Andre, who has been the pilot of the Flyers for the entire two years, will do some reminiscing and recall high lights of the 104 midnight broadcasts.

Established under Hal Kemp's régime, the Midnight Flyers have achieved national and even international reputation as a fount of exceptional radio entertainment. Fan mail has poured in from every state in the Union and many foreign countries. Tuesday has become the favorite day on many a campus for skipping early classes because of this show.

Among the notables expected to attend tonight are: The King's Jesters, Gale Page, Wayne Van Dyne, Dorothy Page, Joe Lewis, Stanley Morner, Earl Rickard, Lawrence Salerno, Barney Ross, Ireene Wicker, the Doring Sisters, Margo and others who were on hand for the first broadcast 104 weeks ago.

Life begins at 40, but the career of an actress may not be launched until she is past 70. Mme. Schumann-Heink after a career of 56 years as a singer will make her bow as an actress in one of radio's best known dramatic programs, "First Nighter," on NBC next Friday evening. She will appear in a specially written play with Don Ameche and June Meredith, regular stars of the show.

Actual sounds of great events that have made history will be broadcast on the "Pathe News of the Air," a series of 15 minute broadcasts at 8:45 p. m., Monday and Wednesdays, over Mutual Broadcasting system, with W-G-N as the local outlet. Each broadcast will present a "kaleidoscope" of newsworthy voices and audible phenomena such as the trumpeting of elephants, the crying of the Dionnes, and the roar of Vesuvius.

MRS. GELDERT, AUTHOR, DIES IN TENNESSEE

Memphis, Tenn., March 24.—(AP)—Mrs. Napoleon Geldert, 73, the former Grace Duffie Boyland, author, journalist, and lecturer, died today of a heart ailment. She became critically ill several weeks ago.

Mrs. Geldert was the author of "The Old House," published in 1898; "Hosanna and Huzza," "Kids of Many Colors," "The Kiss of Glory," "Yamma Yamma Land," "Steps to Nowhere," "The Supplanter," "The Pipes of Clovis," "Love Finds a Way," a one act play; "John of Joy," "Conquerors," and many verses, essays, short stories, and published lectures. She collaborated with Mrs. Forrestine C. Hooker in her historical novel "When Geronimo Rode," in 1924.

Her work, "Thy Son Liveth," won recognition in 1918. It dealt with a personal experience and a psychic revelation of a mother whose son had died in France.

She was a native of Kalamazoo, Mich., and attended Radcliffe college and the Northwestern Conservatory of Music. After graduation, she served as art critic on the old Daily Inter-Ocean at Chicago, and later conducted a column for the Chicago Journal.

DR. T. A. JENKINS, RETIRED U. OF C. PROFESSOR, DIES

Friends of Dr. Thomas Atkinson Jenkins, 67 years old, professor emeritus of the University of Chicago, were notified last night of his death yesterday in San Francisco, Cal., where he was visiting a son, Francis A. Jenkins, an assistant professor at the University of California. Dr. Jenkins died of pneumonia after an operation.

He retired two years ago after 30 years in the French department at the university. His death interrupted work on a Rockefeller project for research in the French language. Dr. Jenkins was a former president of the Modern Language Association of America. He taught at Vanderbilt university and Swarthmore college.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Marion McGill Jenkins,, and three sons, Francis, Edward, and Wilmer. Funeral services are expected to be held at Swarthmore, Pa.

DR. GEORGE CALE, RAILWAY CHIEF SURGEON, DIES

St. Louis, Mo., March 24.—(AP)—Dr. George W. Cale Jr., 68, chief surgeon for the St. Louis Southwestern railroad, died in a hospital here today after an operation a month ago for gastric ulcers.

He was a fellow in the American College of Surgeons, the Royal College of Surgeons, London, England, and was a member of the American Medical association, the Missouri, Texas, and Arkansas Medical associations, the Southwestern Medical association, and the Mississippi Valley Medical association.

He was a member of the health service bureau for the railroads during the world war and also was a former chief surgeon for the St. Louis and San Francisco railroad.

Gunmen Hold Up Cripple; Throw Him Out of Auto

Robert Allison, 5514 West Augusta street, a cripple, was seated in his small car, which he is able to drive by means of special attachments, on the Center drive in Douglas park, when two gunmen seized him last night. They threw him from the machine into the street, took $7 in cash, and drove away in his car. Allison was able to drag himself to the sidewalk, where he remained until a passerby found him.

3,000 Jugo-Slavs Honor Retiring Chicago Consul

Three thousand Jugo-Slavs and their friends crowded the gold room of the Congress hotel last night to bid farewell to the retiring consul, Dr. George Kolombatovich, who departs this week for a higher position in the Jugo-Slav foreign office at Belgrade. "It is with great regret that I say good-by to Dr. Kolombatovich," said Mayor Kelly, who headed the list of speakers.

CHARLES L. LEE, INVENTOR OF CAR APPLIANCES, DIES

Dayton, O., March 24.—(AP)—Charles L. Lee, 65, credited with originating or developing more than 1,000 inventions, died in his home today after a three months' illness. For many years he was a close associate of Charles F. Kettering, Dayton inventor industrialist.

Most of Lee's work was with automotive appliances, although development of electrical features of the cash register and early electrical refrigeration is attributed to him.

Among Lee's earliest inventions was an automobile which won first prize in its class, in the first automobile show ever held in the United States at Chicago.

Among products attributed to him are oilless bearings for automobiles, the first fuel pump for gasoline engines; the machinery employed in the production of a widely used highest gasoline, and the method of brazing copper to cast iron.

STRESSES NEED FOR BELIEVERS, NOT BELITTLERS

In a "tailspin of morale" produced in part by the world war and the depression, the world now needs more believers and fewer "belittlers," in the opinion of Dr. Bernard C. Clausen, pastor of the First Baptist church of Pittsburgh. He spoke last night at the Sunday Evening club.

"Between the sinking of the Titanic and the burning of the Morro Castle men have even forgotten how to die," asserted Dr. Clausen. "Perhaps the war with its organized disdain did it; perhaps the depression with its rigid limitation of resources did it. There are signs of it everywhere in literature.

"It twisted the Freudian psychology of the subconscious into the brutal suspicion that if we could only sense what people were thinking about we should know what rats they are. The world needs more believers."

MRS. M. O. ADAMS, CONCORD, MASS., DIES AT 92 YEARS

Concord, Mass., March 24.—(AP)—Mrs. Mary Ogden Adams, oldest member of the celebrated presidential family, died late Saturday at the age of 92. She was the widow of Charles Francis Adams, grandson of President John Quincy Adams. Her husband was Lincoln's envoy to Great Britain. Funeral services will be held Tuesday at the Adams mansion in Quincy.

Mrs. Adams leaves two daughters, Mrs. Thomas Nelson Perkins of Westwood, wife of the chairman of the board of the Boston and Maine railroad, and Miss Elizabeth O. Adams of Concord, and two sons, Henry Adams of Concord and John Adams of Lincoln. There are also 11 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Caroline Bartlett Crane of Kalamazoo, Mich., Dies

Kalamazoo, Mich., March 24.—[Special.]—Dr. Caroline Bartlett Crane, 77, writer, minister, lecturer, and sociologist, was fatally injured today in her home. It was believed she suffered a paralytic stroke which caused her to fall downstairs. Her death followed.

Her services to this city were recognized a year ago when a bas-relief of her was unveiled in the public library. She is survived by her husband, Dr. A. W. Crane, and two children, Julianne and W. Bartlett Crane, all of this city. She had been a Unitarian pastor, school teacher, and editor. During the world war she was state chairman of the Michigan division, women's committee, Council of National Defense.

THOUSANDS SEEK 17 MILLIONS IN SNUFF FORTUNE

New Round in Legal Row Opens Today.

Philadelphia, Pa., March 24.—(AP)—An estate of nearly 17 million dollars built from snuff is the prize in a world-wide contest which will enter another round of legal argument tomorrow.

His will, not the widow's, is the point of current controversy and before the claimants will get an opportunity to prove relationship a legal interpretation of an item in his will is necessary.

Garrett, a snuff manufacturer, died Feb. 17, 1895, leaving a will, made five years earlier, disposing of an estate which had grown from 3 to 6 million dollars.

The estate continued to mount, and when Mrs. Garrett died in 1930 it totaled 17 millions. She left a note bequeathing about $62,000, but apparently failed to carry out her husband's instructions to name beneficiaries of the balance.

John F. Brizzie Dies; Veteran of Express Service

Chattanooga, Tenn., March 24.—(AP)—John F. Brizzie, general auditor of the Railway Express agency, died suddenly Saturday night. He was born 59 years ago in Porto Rico, but spent his early life in Virginia. Railway Express officials from New York, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Chicago, and Atlanta will attend the funeral here Tuesday.

Wm. Simpson Weds Boston Girl in June

BY JUDITH CASS.

Of major interest to Chicago society this morning is the announcement of an engagement made the last week-end in Boston. At a dinner party Saturday evening in their home on aristocratic Beacon street, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel A. de Menocal told of the betrothal of their daughter, Beatrice, to William Simpson, youngest of the three sons of Mr. and Mrs. James Simpson of Glencoe and 1200 Lake Shore drive.

Mr. Simpson, who has been working in New York City with the United States Trust company since his graduation from Harvard university last June, was in Boston for the party Saturday evening.

Miss de Menocal is acquainted in Chicago, for she came here to visit the Simpson family last summer. On the paternal side she is a granddaughter of the late Commander A. G. de Menocal of the United States navy, and Mrs. de Menocal. In the '60s Commander de Menocal was the leading proponent of an interoceanic canal and also of the Nicaraguan route for trade vessels. On the maternal side Miss de Menocal is a granddaughter of Mrs. Henry Ashton Crosby of New York.

Wedding in June; to Live in New York.

Mr. Simpson was graduated from St. Paul's before he went to Harvard, where he was a member of the Fly club. He is also a member of the River club in New York. After their marriage in June Mr. Simpson and his bride will live in New York City.

Of course Mr. Simpson's father is well known as the chairman of three major public utility corporations and formerly as a successor of the late Marshall Field as head of one of the world's greatest merchandising organizations. For years, too, the senior Mr. Simpson has been one of Chicago's prominent civic workers.

The eldest of the three Simpson sons, James Simpson Jr., has already served in congress. He was married in 1931 to Ella De Treville Snelling of Boston. On March 18, 1933, the second son, John McLaren Simpson, and Constance Hasler, daughter of Mrs. Edward L. Hasler, were married.

Elizabeth Williams to Wed T. E. Covel.

Another announcement of interest this morning is that which Mr. and Mrs. George Bassett Williams of Evanston are making of the engagement of their daughter, Elizabeth West, to Thomas Edmonson Covel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bordon Covel of Brookline, Mass. Mr. Covel, who lived in Chicago for a couple of years, also attended Harvard, where he, like Mr. Simpson, was a member of the fashionable Fly club.

Miss Williams is a graduate of Smith college, and has spent some time in Europe, where she attended the University of Berlin when not traveling. Mr. Covel, who was transferred to Washington last fall, was prepared at St. Mark's for Harvard. While in Chicago he shared bachelor quarters with several young men both in Lake Forest and on the near north side, and he was a member of the debutante and post-deb crowd. He and Miss Williams will be married the 24th of next month. The wedding will be held in the evening at St. Mark's church in Evanston, and a small reception will follow in the Williams home, 1401 Davis street.

The wedding of Miss Ruth Marian Quigley of Cleveland and Robert Arkel Moffett of Chicago takes place this afternoon at the Palm Beach estate of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Thomas Quigley. Young Mr. Moffett's father, James A. Moffett, federal housing administrator, will be best man at the wedding, and Miss Constance Wadley Bader of Boston will attend Miss Quigley as maid of honor.

Evanston Benefit Style Show Easter Monday.

On Easter Monday, when spring will have burst forth in all its glory, the Evanston board of the Northwestern University settlement will hold its annual card party and fashion show at the Country Club of Evanston. The first plans were told over the week-end by Mrs. John H. S. Lee, who is the general chairman.

As in former years, the models are to be 20 of the loveliest debutantes, post-debs, and young matrons in Chicago and on the north shore. The clothes they will model will be the smartest spring creations four fashionable shops have to offer. Another attraction will be the small pages, who will be boys from the settlement house, dressed in suits representing the various countries.

All of the proceeds from the party, Mrs. Thomas H. Eddy, president of the board explains, are going to carry on the work of the settlement, which cares for more than 1,000 persons a day. In an overcrowded neighborhood the settlement provides vocational training and classes in citizenship for men, cooking and sewing and instruction in the care of children for women, and recreational guidance for children.

Mrs. Arlington C. Harvey is chairman of publicity for the party. The other chairmen include Mrs. Robert L. Scott, Mrs. Vernon David, Mrs. Walter Clyde Jones, Mrs. John E. Wilder, Mrs. Kenneth Burgess, Mrs. William B. Johnson, and Mrs. William H. Barnes.

Cocktail Dance Will Benefit Infant Welfare.

NOVEL WITHOUT A NAME.

By Jane Little, 9 years old.

CHAPTER 1, INSTALMENT 1.

There was a French couple who were very poor. Their names were La Salle, Jean and Yovonne. They had just been married and were sad for only one thing. They were poor. They would not have been poor if they had not run away to never come back again. They lived in a broken down house in Chicago [of course, the poor part]. The woman had only two calico dresses [that were very old and patched]. Her bridegroom a pair of old pants and a shirt or two. But, of course, they were very clean people. Yovonne had always wished for a baby daughter, but now she thought different because she knew that they could not care for it. They sometimes had nothing in the house to eat. Jean most of the time came home empty handed, then they would have no supper. Of course, they had no friends at all. As far as they knew they had no relatives either. Once in a long time Jean would come home with more than a dollar. One night he came home. His wife was waiting empty handed [for she, too, was getting little jobs].

"O, Jean, we will have no supper, and you so tired and hungry," and suddenly burst into tears. Jean said, comforting her, "But I brought home $20."

"Yes, darling. I did. It's from a rich man. You may have it all if you will just stop crying long enough for me to explain."

"The First Legion" to Move, Making Way for Another Play

"The First Legion," the drama about the Jesuit order of priesthood now at the Harris theater with Bert Lytell as its star, will move to the Selwyn theater next Sunday night, and will continue its Chicago run until April 13. The removal will be caused by the arrival of "Three Men on a Horse" at the Harris next Sunday.

The Rialto theater, at State and Van Buren streets, will reopen next Friday night. It will give burlesque shows with May Brown as the leading personality in a resident company.

Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne will begin rehersals today in Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew." Their first performance will be given in Pittsburgh, April 22. Later they will appear in the drama festival at Ann Arbor, Mich. C. C.

Good Morning!

Pals—a puma and a deer!

Sounds impossible, doesn't it? Well — in "Sequoia" — the impossible strangely, beautifully, and believably occurs!

"Sequoia" [genus of big trees of the pine family] is a wild animal picture like no wild animal picture you have ever seen before. Beasts of the forests are its principal actors. The humans present are more or less negligible. And, against the wild and lovely background of the Sierras, a drama unfolds that completely baffles you from the production standpoint.

The principals are Malibu, a deer, and Gatto, a puma, adopted in their babyhood by Toni, daughter of a writer. Toni, who, with her father, is spending the summer in the mountains, comes across the tiny, helpless things and takes them home. She sees no reason why, if they are brought up to love and understand each other, a deer and puma shouldn't be friends. . . . She starts out to prove her theory.

The baby deer and the baby puma have marvelous times together. But, as the puma grows older, he slips out o' nights and goes a-raiding. . . . The young forest ranger who's interested in Toni tells her she must let Gatto go. . . . Well—the time's at hand, anyhow, for the Martins to go back to town. So one sad day Toni takes her two wild darlings by the hand, so to speak, and gives them back to the great out of doors. . . .

Circumstances separate the animals. Malibu becomes king of a herd. Gatto goes about HIS business. One day Gatto, crouching to leap on a deer drinking at a water hole, recognizes Malibu! And here is one of the scenes that just about defies belief. Fearlessly the deer looks at the advancing puma. The latter's tail begins to wag and, in a moment, two old friends are joyfully renewing acquaintance—and a friendship that lasts through thick and thin. . . .

Tragedy stalks the pals, for hunters are abroad. The picture's big punch is the episode in which a certain cruel chap, Bergman, who is trailing Malibu, in turn is followed by an angry Gatto. . . .!

Tragedy, pathos, laughter, are curiously and continuously intertwined throughout the production. The baby puma crying over its dead mother, mauling her, trying with his little white teeth to nip some response from her quiet face—simply breaks your heart. . . . Then—Malibu's baby deprived of his mother and being led by the big father to the house where he himself had received such kindness, and where again live the folks he loves is another compelling incident.

The rattler, crushed under Malibu's flying feet as it threatens a Chinese baby and, incidentally, Malibu's deer baby. . . . O, I could go on and on —but I won't because here's a picture that should be allowed to bring you its surprises first hand.

Of course, there WERE tricks of production—but if I KNEW just what they were I wouldn't tell—and you shouldn't think of them. The illusion of "Sequoia" is too marvelous to be spoiled by analyzing. AND—

The deer and the puma do play together happily, naturally, showing every evidence of a friendship and understanding that is in no way faked.

Nathan Milstein Brilliant in Unusual Violin Program

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Nathan Milstein's violin recital program at Orchestra hall yesterday afternoon was one of the most uncommon in construction and most brilliant in performance of the entire season. It began with three sonatas, Vivaldi's in D major, Bach's in C major [unaccompanied], and Beethoven's in F major, opus 24. There was an intermission, then two of the Paganini Caprices [also unaccompanied], and three pieces by Ravel, Novacek, and Smetana.

Three sonatas, even though two are ancient, are quite a handful, and two appearances for unaccompanied violin are plenty and to spare except for other violinists.

He has a tone of great loveliness, with the single exception that once in a great while he tries to put more force into a low note than the mechanism of the instrument can support. But the Beethoven Sonata played by him with Leopold Mittmann at the piano was a perfect bit of classical performance, calm, restrained, always lovely, and an ideal duet between the two instruments. And the Ravel "Berceuse," one of the most interesting works on the program, was another thing of great beauty.

A new singer, destined with luck to make a reputation, Eva Bandrowska, soprano, made her first Chicago appearance at the Studebaker theater last night Her voice is a joy to the ear in its healthy, well defined tone, and it would seem to be in a channel permitting it to reach great heights with ease and certainty. It is flexible enough to permit her the display of the arias from "Rigoletto" and "Lakme," dramatic enough to make a distinguished effect in Liszt's "Loreley," lyric enough to be charming and lovely in Strauss' "Staendchen" and Reger's "Marias Wiegenlied."

Frieda Galantiere, pianist, gave a recital in Kimball hall yesterday afternoon, featuring works of large dimensions, such as the Bach-Tausig Toccata and Fugue in D minor, Schumann's Sonata in G minor, Chopin's in B-flat minor, and Dohnanyi's Rhapsody in E-flat minor, with a group of shorter pieces. She attacks boldly, plays with a large tone, shows considerable facility, and was greatly applauded by her audience.

Designers Hit Style Peak in Daytime Dress

Slim, Super-Fitted Clothes Are Beauties.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

At last daytime clothes are models really to run a fever over. Pluggy looking things have vanished. Straight, slim, super-fitted numbers with clever introductions of bows, color, tuckings, and other detail make these spring beauties the pick of the showings.

Sensational ingenuity has been displayed by truly inspired designers. They cut silk crêpe with a fine lot of dash and seam the stuff together with some grand results. Whether you dress in black, brown, navy blue, or lighter colors, these 1935 daytime dresses are just what you have dreamed about for seasons.

Plain and striped taffeta ribbons do a lot of necking around otherwise dark colored silk; so do bows of checks or merely contrasting high color. Belts with long wide buckles that reach almost from hip to hip are another form of bright color contrast.

Skirts are plaited. Some of the newest models (if you can manage it) have shirrings and quite a bit of fullness in the center of the skirt. Bias seams have gone the way of all other well used fashions, and draping is the trick to watch for nowadays. But don't forget such details as shirrings, tuckings, small insets, and bits of fine handwork.

All silk crêpe makes the smartest of spring daytime dresses, whether you pick a smooth two piece or one piece outfit or the slick new tailored suits that can be worn under wool coats. Silk with trick textures, like waffle square, or semi-sheer diagonals of self and blurred checks, and even a serge-like weave, are a few of the possibilities.

Sleeves in most buys are long and made so that the dress can be worn without a coat as soon as it is warm. Necklines are high and also cut so that you can make them higher or lower. Clips are still the smartest decoration you can use; indeed, sometime the smartest dress you find uses a pair of decorative clips as the only contrast and trim.

Fashion photograph . . . spring colors in new knits. This model of light green is flecked with wood brown. It's a two piece arrangement with a slim straight skirt held at the waist with an elastic. The slipover top has short sleeves, a roll-over collar, and tricky ribbing to form the yoke waist band and sleeves. Available in a Chicago shop.

Keep Away from Water

By Alice Campbell.

SYNOPSIS.

Sarah MacNeil, young American living in London, accepts the hazardous though thrilling post as companion to Miss Christine Venables, prim, kindly and wealthy, who has been receiving letters that cannot be traced, threatening her life. Miss Venables spends most of the year at Ste. Brigitte, a small resort in southern France. Her nephew, Harry, is to join her there soon. Before leaving London Miss Venables' widowed sister-in-law, Mrs. Mark Venables, Harry's stepmother, dies suddenly. She had been treated by Dr. Gilcrest, from Ste. Brigitte, who was visiting in London. On the way to Ste. Brigitte Miss Venables tells Sarah that the death threats began after her friend, Maj. Frampton, was killed in a fall down an elevator shaft. She believes he was murdered. She and the major were both threatened by two oriental drug sellers they had had prosecuted. Miss Venables' particular friends in Ste. Brigitte, besides Dr. Gilcrest, are the Baron Henri de Bellesnaves and his beautiful wife; Beryl Tomlins, town librarian and harmless gossip, and a few old residents of the resort hotel. Sarah gathers that Dr. Gilcrest is in love with the baroness. Harry arrives. Beryl Tomlins, who had just had a prescription of Dr. Gilcrest's filled by his dispenser, Marjory Barrows, is taken suddenly ill and dies. Dr. Gilcrest states an intestinal hemorrhage caused her death. Miss Venables receives another threatening letter, telling her she has one more day to live. Harry is on a visit to Monte Carlo. The baroness has gone to Arles for the day. The fatal day passes safely. Miss Venables takes her medicine and retires. Shortly after Sarah is awakened by her agonized call. She dies within the hour, after declaring to Sarah that she was poisoned. Sarah tells Dr. Gilcrest, who has been left a substantial income by Miss Venables, that it is up to him to demand a post-mortem.

INSTALMENT XXXVII.

THE DOCTOR SUSPICIONED.

Miss Venables had possessed a private fortune left by her mother and independent of the one controlled by the entail. This she could bestow as she wished, and had first meant to leave it to a research institution. Latterly—in point of fact some fifteen months before—she had conceived the idea of relieving Brian Gilcrest of financial strain to enable him to engage in a wider work. She had not informed him of her intention, thinking that if she lived and the present danger ceased she would find means of settling the income upon him, but now, with a strong presentiment of death haunting her, she had wished to prepare him for the fortune soon to be his.

"From my own observation of your character and abilities," the letter wound up, "I feel confident the money will be wisely used. So easily could you have enlisted my sympathies by disclosing the events which interrupted your chosen career, but this you have never done, thus leaving me to learn the truth from one whose admiration for you equals my own. You may guess to whom I refer. That you may live long and find many ways of alleviating human suffering is the earnest wish of your grateful friend and patient, Christine Venables."

What unconscious irony was contained in this last sentence! Yet throughout the whole letter breathed dignified restraint—no emotional gush, nor any hint that Gilcrest was expected to act as an instrument of justice if suspicion over the writer's death arose. More than ever was Sarah convinced that certain terrible words would never have been uttered if Miss Venables could have foreseen whose honor would be involved. Still, having been uttered, they altered everything. . . .

The man opposite waited with harassed impatience, his expression half challenge, half appeal.

"Well?" he prompted at last. "Now do you see—?"

She did see, far too much.

"Is it true you had no knowledge of this legacy?" she asked.

He made a violent gesture of repudiation. "How could I have guessed? There was no indication of it—none. She was my patient. No more. I respected and liked her—who could help it?—but good and kind as she was it never once crossed my mind she meant to load me with benefits either during her lifetime or after her death. It's a bolt out of the blue." He drew his hand almost savagely across his forehead. "I tell you, I'm stunned by it. Bowled over."

"Well," she remarked evenly, "in view of this it seems to me still more imperative for the death to be investigated—and for you to make the report. You can hardly do otherwise. Isn't that so?"

He bit his lip to force back an angry retort. "But certainly it is imperative," he replied coldly. "It wasn't before, but it is now. Why else do you suppose I showed you the letter? In fact, I came here this morning for the express purpose of telling you the post-mortem would have to be held. Miss Tomlin's funeral was to have been held today. It will have to be postponed."

"Miss Tomlins too!" Startled and curious, she eyed him searchingly as she said, "then you do admit her death was queer as well!"

"I admit nothing—except that if I've been unlucky enough to make one wrong diagnosis there's an equal chance of being wrong over the other. That's a bad enough admission for any doctor—but I shall have to make it."

Bowing her head she murmured that no doubt his decision was wise.

"O, so you think it's wise, do you?" he demanded in a voice bitter with resentment. "I see . . . In that case, you might advise our exhuming the baron's dog to find out what caused its death."

She retorted with perfect seriousness. "Well, and why not? Now you've mentioned it, it strikes me as an excellent plan."

He glared back at her so thunderstruck that she found herself retreating from her firm stand. Was the second post-mortem really necessary? She faltered. After all, Miss Tomlins had made no accusation, and if he was convinced that mesenteric embolism did bring about her death . . .

He cut her short by an obstinate shake of the head. "If as you say there has been talk about her already, there'll be more now this other thing has happened and I am known to benefit by one of these deaths. I must put a stop to it by the only means at my disposal." He paused, adding, pointedly, "Assuming of course, that a medical verdict will stop it. There may be others who, like you, are little impressed by post-mortems."

It was a well merited rebuke. Sarah reddened, about to protest, but at her sudden movement the copy of Trios Contes slipped from her lap to the floor. In a flash she was reminded of the Baroness' note, full to the brim of suspicious implications. She rose without looking at him.

"I wanted to return the book to you," she said in a hard tone. "I've finished with it—and now, I suppose, I can leave this entire matter in your hands. Do you want me to explain the situation to Harry?"

"If you like—but I had better have a talk with him, too."

She walked quickly away, holding herself erect and stiff, and aware that his gaze was following her.

"He knew this money was coming to him. He must have known. The Baroness spun the story—false, of course—which influenced Miss Venables to make that will. She was in on the whole thing from the beginning, and kept him primed while he went on being impersonal and reserved in order to impress Miss Venables with his disinterestedness. But for finding that note I might have believed him just now. For a moment I did believe, and even now, with all this staring me in the face, I don't know . . . suppose poison is found, and he's not responsible? Can he prove he wasn't?"

It was a ghastly possibility, the trouble being that she could not see how any one save Gilcrest could have meddled with the capsules—except, to be sure, the dispenser who made them up, and the idea that Marjory Barrows could be guilty was too far-fetched to consider even in passing. Marjory had nothing to gain by removing either a potential slanderer or one who stood between the man she served and a substantial legacy—nor could she be a criminal lunatic who killed without reason.

"But who else is there? The baroness fingered the bottle the other morning, and she did not inquire about Miss Venables' health, but I was watching her all the time, and I can swear she never touched the capsules inside the bottle.

All at once it struck her that in all the recent discussion there had been no reference whatever to Miss Venables' own theory. Gilcrest, she was aware, had always behaved a little oddly on this subject, but it was extraordinary to have ignored the entire matter of drug-peddlers, seeing how closely the anonymous letters were interwoven with the dead woman's fears. It was as she reëntered her room that a solution once considered and dismissed with scorn rushed back into her mind. Suppose Gilcrest himself wrote those letters? No one better than he understood the effect of constant terror on a hyper-sensitive nervous system. No one could more surely have reckoned on recurrent gastric attacks induced by alarm making a last, fatal attack seem so like what had gone before as to deceive even the victim herself. The dietary precautions provoked by each warning could have been expected to banish any logical suspicion of foul play. Miss Venables had given utterance to an illogical suspicion. In the face of reason she had declared herself poisoned.

Film Folk Gape at Rawson of Byrd's Party

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

Hollywood, Cal., March 24.—[Special.]—The movie studio took more notice of Kennett L. Rawson, 25 years old, of Chicago, who was staf navigator of Rear Admiral Byrd's recent eighteen month Antarctic expedition, than tourists usually take in the studios themselves, when Rawson and seven other returning members of the Byrd party yesterday watched scenes being filmed of "The Crusades" and other pictures on their first day back in America.

Young Rawson, 1550 North State parkway, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Rawson, has wide hazel eyes, a deceptively youthful look and an overwhelming modesty. All who met him asked if he was more than 19 years old and then blushed when they learned the young man with more than one degree and Antartic sea experience, had navigated Byrd's sailing cruise of exploration from the Little America base, several of the hazardous plane flights and the foot expeditions into continental Antarctica during his year and a half with the admiral.

Enjoying the by-play which occurred when Rawson was introduced to the movie folk were John Herrmann of Long Beach, Cal., and Carl Petersen of Long Island, N. Y., the two official cameramen of the expedition, who felt at home on the studio lot because they had been assigned to Little America from the Paramount Newsreel offices.

Rawson told of weather so murky and the sky so full of snow that all sense of up and down as well as sky, sea and earth was lost. "Even the seagulls feared to fly," he said. "They would only walk along the snow. If they flew, they were apt to fly head-on into the ground, thinking they were heading up into the air. That is how thick with snow the air gets in those blizzards."

Herrmann and Petersen brought back 150,000 feet of exciting film and this will be relied on to help pull Admiral Byrd out of the $50,000 indebtedness reported as the result of his exploration and weather observation expedition.

"Our cook was a former marine corporal named Carboni, and hard-boiled," Rawson remarked. "He was a very good cook, but had some fixed ideas about breakfast. 'Blank blank the blank blanks; he used to say, 'let them eat hot cakes.'" But Rawson got the tiredest of beans.

Paramount studio nominates six of its younger players for a stardom in a list of "Protégés of 1935." They are Grace Bradley, redhead, Brooklyn; Wendy Barrie, brown hair, London, England; Gertrude Michael, brown hair, Talladega, Ala.; Katherine De Mille, very dark brunette, Cecil De Mille's adopted daughter, from Vancouver, Canada; Gail Patrick, brunette, tall and stately, Birmingham, Ala.; Ann Sheridan [until recently Clara Lou Sheridan], brown hair, Denton, Tex. Not a blonde in the list.

Phil Scheuer, movie critic for the Los Angeles Times, who was denied admittance to the Warnér studio after his recent review criticizing "Devil Dogs of the Air," has been told he is allowed on the lot again. Harry Warner in New York overruled the action taken by a department head in Hollywood.

Beech Tree.

Patterns of this quilt design are 5 cents, stamps or coin. Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of The Tribune Public Service offices, One South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower.

Certain types of old quilts become identified with the regions in which they have been most popular. Thus the "Beech Tree" pattern is typical of New England. For this coverlet, yellow, green, and white are the favorite color combination of present day quiltmakers. Brown and green, and red and green were used to make the first of these old quilts.

A charming little Norwegian musical film opened at the Julian yesterday. "En Stille Flirt" is the name and its star is Tutta Berntzen, Norwegian actress. The musical score was composed by Jules Sylvain.

All of the dialog—with the exception of some remarks offered by a couple of Americans in the cast, is in Norwegian. But the acting is understandable and the photography and Scandinavian scenery and settings are unusually fine.

Welfare is giving a novel benefit. It is to be a cocktail dance from 4 to 7 o'clock at the Exmoor Country club.

Mrs. Samuel Bingham Jr. and Mrs. Betty Irwin Henry have been appointed co-chairmen of the committee in charge by the president, Mrs. William White.

Miss Helen Dawes is leaving today by plane for the Champie ranch in Arizona provided there isn't a low ceiling or any other prank of nature to prevent. Since she is to be gone only until April 10 the plane will save a good bit of time. On her way home she will visit the Fred Mangets, parents of the former Elizabeth Manget, in whose wedding party Miss Dawes was last December when Miss Manget became Mrs. Cyrus R. Smith. The Mangets live in Dallas, Tex.

Miss Priscilla Morse has returned to Lake Forest after a delightful visit with Miss Caryl Ely, who, like Miss Morse, was one of last season's debutantes, and Miss Ely's mother, Mrs. Jay Morse Ely, on their Thomasville [Ga.] plantation. Miss Morse will be at home for the next few weeks, and then she is looking forward to a trip to Colorado.

The Ely plantation will be crowded with young people the next few weeks, for several college students plan to pass part of their vacations there. Miss Frances Jeffery went down from Vassar, and Jay Ely Jr. and some of his classmates from Harvard joined them. Jefferson D. Currier went down Saturday night to visit the Elys en route to spend a fortnight with his aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Seaverns, in Nokomis, Fla. Miss Jeffrey, too, is en route south. She will spend the major part of her vacation with her aunt, Miss Frances Whedon, in Palm Beach.

Mrs. F. G. Wacker and Son Go South.

Mrs. Frederick G. Wacker and her son, Frederick Jr., have departed for a trip to South Carolina. They will return April 1. Miss Ellen Wacker, another of last season's debutantes, remained in town for she did not like to interrupt her studies at the Art institute.

Mrs. George T. Langhorne left Saturday night for Arizona to join her mother, Mrs. Edward C. Waller, for three or four weeks.

Mrs. Hempstead Washburne and her sister, Mrs. Charles F. Clarke, are expected to return to their Lake Forest homes early in April from a visit to their father, Thomas C. Dennehy, in Pasadena, and their sister, Princess Josephine Galitzine, in Tucson, where she and her husband and their baby are spending the winter.

The Charles Dennehys will return early next month to their home in Lake Forest from a visit to his father, and the junior Thomas C. Dennehys and the Ralph Ishams—Mrs. Isham was Eleanor Dennehy—already are at home from their annual visits to their father.

Mr. and Mrs. John E. Hughes arrived at home from a month's vacation on their Virginia plantation in time to meet their four sons, John, Mansfield, Marshall, and Milton, who returned Saturday for their spring vacation. All four boys are at Groton.

Mrs. Charles F. Glore arrived at home a few days ago from California. She plans to remain at home through the Easter holidays for her son, Charles Jr., will return from St. Paul's to spend his spring vacation at home. The Glores' daughter, Frances, is studying at Miss Nixon's school in Rome, Italy.

Mrs. Clive Runnells, who was in Chicago for a few days at the Ambassador, has gone to Pierce, Tex., until April 25, when she will return here for another visit. The former Mary Withers and her husband moved to Santa Barbara several years ago. Her sister, Mrs. Laurance H. Armour, will return from the south next month.

Dixie Women's Alliance to Plan Benefit Today.

Mrs. Americus F. Callahan will be hostess to the Southern Woman's Educational alliance, which will meet at 2 o'clock today in her apartment at 1325 Astor street to complete plans for its annual spring benefit. The alliance is sponsoring a performance at the Dixiana Show Boat the evening of April 26. Mrs. William A. Pusey, Mrs. Hal Crompton Bangs, and Mrs. Hubert Burnham are other members of the alliance.

The Rev. Michael Earls will lecture at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon in the Lake Shore Drive hotel in a Lenten series sponsored by the Chapel Guild of the Cenacle for the benefit of the Convent of the Cenacle, 513 Fullerton parkway. The Rev. Father Earls is lecturing through the courtesy of Mrs. William Roy Carney. Mrs. William J. Stenson is president of the Cenacle Guild.

Mrs. Frank M. Gordon, who has two publicity jobs, one for the Madonne center dinner-dance April 27 at the Palmer house and the other for the Vocational Society for Shut-ins, called to say that the Vocational society will have its spring opening tomorrow in its shop in the Woman's Athletic club building. Some lovely new things have been made by the shut-ins for whom the shop provides a livelihood and will be on sale.

WOMAN'S AND MISS' DRESS.

During spring and summer it always is practical to have a little jacket to go with a dress. There are so many times when just a dress, especially if in town, seems inadequate. This jacket dress is the kind smartly dressed women are looking for, and it's practical and youthful looking, and easily made.

The pattern, No. 3056 comes in sizes 14, 16, and 18 years, and 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measure.

Give Child a Substitute for Bad Activities

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

In yesterday's article we were concerned chiefly with the boys and girls of the inbetween years and of the teens. We were pointing out, you may remember, that in taking away from a boy or girl some undesirable activity or in trying to break up an undesirable habit it was unwise simply to deprive them, to leave time loose and empty on their hands. You must see that they have something equally interesting but wholesome to take its place.

This same principle should be applied in the management of the baby and the small child. We must accept the fact that the small child needs great activity—that he has certain legitimate desires. Consequently you can't expect him to stop doing the thing you object to without substituting or helping him to find some other way of supplying the need of the moment.

Now by that I don't mean that you can never say "don't" to a small child—or that you can't ever prohibit his doing something, but must run immediately with the substitute article in your hand—or must always distract his attention elsewhere. That would be absurd. Substitution and indirection and attention-distracting can be carried too far.

But generally speaking, the principle of providing a desirable or constructive activity when you wish to discourage an undesirable or negative one is an important policy and should be put in general practice.

Take, as a splendid example, the "touching" phase of little childhood. What do many mothers write me? This: "My baby girl is driving me distracted. She is 'into everything.' She handles this and touches that. And when I tell her not to, or take it away, in a minute she is into something else. Even when I slap her little hands she cries and is good for a few minutes, then gets her hands on something else."

Here it is obvious, if you think for a moment, that that small daughter's sense of touch is helping her to discover the world. That sense of touch must be satisfied. It won't be denied. Empty hands and "being a nice, quiet little girl" are not the answer. She must be allowed a reasonable freedom to touch things in and about the house [in living room and kitchen], and in addition she must be provided with satisfying playthings.

So, likewise, we don't constantly tell a child to stop biting his nails, or making nervous movements, or make "don't" the most frequent word in our vocabulary. When undesirable ways seem settled or chronic we provide an immediate substitute, or by making changes in his scheme of living, eventually bring about the ends we consider desirable.

We have two fully written leaflets that have proved helpful in managing the young child—one on "When Your Small Child Says No," and the other is called "Don't Touch—How Not to Say It." EITHER ONE will be sent on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., March 24.—[Special.]—President and Mrs. Roosevelt went for a motor ride in the country this afternoon. Their daughter, Mrs. John Boettiger, who came down Friday to see her two children who are at the White House, returned to New York this afternoon.

The Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Morgenthau have done to Sea Island, Ga., for a short visit.

BY MARY MEADE.

Suppose that somebody were to present you with two layers of plain white cake. Or even suppose you were to make them. With those two layers what kind of delectable dessert would would you make? It's a problem, with so many interesting fillings and frostings. However, we put that problem up to ourselves the other day and then made a list of the choicest of our choices.

Well, we had to make our own cake. In case you do, too, here's an excellent recipe for a tender, fluffy, two layer white cake:

Fluffy White Cake.

½ cup butter or other shortening
1½ cups sugar
3 cups sifted cake flour
3 teaspoons baking bowder
1 cup milk
½ teaspoon vanilla or lemon extract
4 egg whites

Cream the butter until it is the consistency of whipped cream. Then add the sugar gradually, and continue creaming until the mixture is light and fluffy. Add the flour, which has been sifted together three times with the baking powder, alternately with the milk, a small amount at a time, beating after each addition until smooth. Add the flavoring and, finally, fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake in two greased 9 inch layer pans in a moderate oven [375 degrees F.] for 25 to 30 minutes.

An old favorite for putting layers together is an orange filling, with the top and sides of the cake piled with a fluffy boiled icing and decorated with orange sections which have been freed from white membrane. A lime filling is a little more unusual perhaps, with the top of the cake garnished with paper thin slices of raw lime.

Orange Filling.

1 cup sugar
3 tablespoons flour
Few grains salt
½ cup orange juice
3 tablespoons lemon juice
¼ cup water
1 egg, well beaten
3 teaspoons grated orange rind
1 tablespoon butter

Combine the sugar, flour, and salt in the top of a double boiler. Add the fruit juices and water, and cook for six to eight minutes over boiling water. Then add the beaten egg, cook until well thickened, and remove from the heat. Stir in the orange rind and butter and cool before spreading.

Lime Filling.

1½ cups sugar
1 cup water
2 teaspoons lemon juice
4 tablespoons lime juice
2 teaspoons grated lemon rind
4 tablespoons margarine

Combine the cornstarch and sugar, and cook with the water over a low heat until thick and transparent, stirring constantly. Remove from the heat, add the fruit juices, grated rind, and margarine, and cook.

A mint cream filling is a happy thought for any cake. Try this between layers, aud use creamy chocolate icing for the outer decoration.

Mint Cream Filling.

¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup water
2 egg yolks
1 teaspoon mint extract
Green food coloring

Mix the sugar and cornstarch together and blend with the water. Cook this mixture together slowly until thick, stirring constantly. Stir in the beaten egg yolks, cook for two or three minutes longer, and cool. Add the mint extract and color a delicate green.

Or, if you like, leave off the top frosting entirely and put your cake together over a rich apricot cream filling like a glorified Washington pie.

Apricot Cream Filling.

1¼ cups sweetened condensed milk
¼ cup lemon juice
½ cup cooked drained apricots

Blend the milk and lemon juice together and stir until the mixture thickens. [You needn't heat or cook this—it just happens.] Fold into the thickened mixture the sieved apricots, put between layers of cake, and dust the top with confectioner's sugar.

CONQUERING CONTRACT

By P. HAL SIMS

"ACCORDING TO THE SIMS SYSTEM, YOU MUST . . ."

I hope that you will preface your remarks on discussions of contract problems and hands very, very seldom with the above introductory phrase. We have to use the word "system," but I do not like it in connection with this or any other game. It denotes something rigid, inflexible, tyrannical, and cards seem to rebel with violence against all attempts to rule them with a rod of iron or to determine ahead just what results it is their duty to yield, and then abuse them if they prefer on this occasion to prove our "rule" by being an exception to it instead of an obedient illustration. You who have followed these articles consistently know that I am as strict as any one should presume to be in connection with a game, in urging you to be pedantically meticulous in applying the system mechanically in a few special situations. I mean those which deal directly and immediately with slam angles, such as opening bids of two or three in a suit and their later bidding procedure. I am also dictatorial about jump takeouts and other slam tries. These are situations calling for method, not imagination, and you cannot stress the word "system" too emphatically in this connection. Again, I am opposed to the shading of no-trump opening bids or to irregular use of it, as for instance, with a singleton or worthless doubleton even if the hand contains great strength to offset such defect. Yes, "according to the system you must" respect these favorites of ours which serve us so well if we keep them uncontaminated by shading. These are the demigods which must be kept on their pedestals.

Descending to the humdrum level of rough and tumble conflict, when we are "street fighting" to defend a part score, or are deciding whether or not to try for a game which we know is sketchy, we cannot depend only on "system" to make our decisions—to bid our hands for us. In this field of battle, let us

BORROW THE TERMINOLOGY OF THE MEDICAL PROFESSION, which really applies with striking aptitude. You see thirteen cards; these are the symptoms. You have to diagnose the constitution of twenty-six cards. To proceed from the known to the unknown, you initiate a series of tests or analyses. As information—positive or negative—about the partner's hand filters through, you reinterpret the symptoms revealed to you at the start in your own hand. What I am getting at is this: I like immensely the word

"TREATMENT" TO REPLACE "SYSTEM" because it describes my mental approach to this game. You could not please me more than by discussing my theories in some such terms as these:

"Sims has a treatment for this type of hand which I think would have handled the problem more safely or more logically." I classify hands by types. To select the best of several possible treatments, one should consider probable playing angles as well as strength and type. Judgment, experience, imagination, card sense all come in as factors in helping one to choose between several feasible treatments, and this scope for thought and initiative is what makes us love contract so ardently. If "system" could settle everything, it would cut out the human side of the game and we would soon be bored and seek for other diversions.

You Must Not Expect to Be Always Right.

However assiduously you study and practice playing any method, it cannot eliminate your need for thought in making decisions. System cannot evaluate or classify the minor factor which might decide me to open the bidding, let us say, on a borderline type of hand in second position with shaded values because it seemed to me to have an aggressive tinge. A stray jacketen might be influencing me more or less subsconciously. On the same hand Unger and Wernher might pass because the hand made a less aggressive impression on them than on me. They might be right this time; the treatment they had preferred might get a better result than mine. Next time I may be right, when we do not agree. Yet we are all "Sims" players and in thorough agreement on all points of the system. Players are individuals, and their individual mental qualities will cause them to differ in their selection between two or more treatments none of which are violations of the system, and no one of which is clearly the only reasonable choice.

Love Laughs at Depressions and Ventures Into Marriage

BY DORIS BLAKE.

Well, the crêpe hangers will have to take in the wreath and put it away somewhere until another good cause comes along. The young who "could not afford to marry" are getting married anyway, their elders' wails to the contrary nothwithstanding.

We were among the crêpe hangers ourselves, we must admit, at times. We wondered how these many, many thousands of young couples were going to manage a domestic ménage on the prevailing wage of young persons. But 122,336 young couples in New York state alone, in 1934, answered with a rush to the license bureau and a t'ell with all the old bogies. Fifteen thousand more couples than in 1933 took vows to cherish and love and protect and try to make a go of things on the lesser salary standards of the moment. Proving what? That you can't kill the spirit of adventure in the young. That to this younger group must go credit for quick adjustment to a new financial order.

In the enormous group of over 120,000 couples, there would be a few couples qualified to answer to the charge of foolhardiness, but the major element unquestionably would be sane youngsters, seriously aware of what they are doing and a group who won't be cheated out of the right to marry.

It looks to us, at least, as if this young element has been quick to grasp the realities of the moment. Unlike the generations just ahead of them, marriage does not mean an established home with all the trimmings and two cars in the garage. It means an adventure in which there'll be a lot of loving and being together and working and plenty of self-denial.

Yet we still hear, in this department of much wailing and weeping because marriage can't be thought of on $25 or $35 a week. How about it, you wailers and weepers? Can't you come to grips with reality as these many thousand other couples have done? Haven't you the stuff in you to try?

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Give us women time and we'll get around to doing the same thing. Well, saner, then.

Witness the difference with which reducing jobs are tended today. So much more sanely than a few years ago, when any freak diet could sell itself on a promise of pounds off.

Then, take the matter of hair, and the hair brush. Women who, a couple of years ago, couldn't be persuaded to use a hair brush, are buying them now and using them. They've suffered enough hair troubles in the interim to make them realize a scalp can't get along without a certain amount of disciplining with the hair brush. They're becoming more skilled, of course, in setting their waves, and they are helped along in this respect by the simple and efficient wavesetting lotions.

But the main point is that smart women are buying hair brushes, good hair brushes and digging them into the scalp regardless of wave and curl. Consequently we are seeing more of that healthy, shimmering beauty to hair. There isn't another way under heaven you can get the vital, glowing, glossy quality to hair that lies in the daily use of a brush. The "polished look," I like to call it, a look to hair that sets well on beautiful groomed women.

There are still many heads to be converted to the hair brush gospel. Those dull, lifeless looking heads, sprinkled with dandruff and, especially hair in the graying stage. Women in the last named group, instead of worrying about dyes and tints, could do a great deal more for themselves by brushing their heads until the now discouraged looking locks perk up, look alive and, though turning in color, are still a long way from dead. That's the way to feel about it anyway.

There are simply grand hair brushes on the market today. Perhaps you have to pay a bit for the good ones. But, with care, they last indefinitly, and, in the long run, they cost little compared to the substitute treatments, such as tinting, dyeing, and special scalp care with corrective lotions.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Leland Sterry of 410 Park avenue on Wednesday at the Harbor sanitarium, this city. Mrs. Sterry is the former Miss Kathleen W. Jackson.

Miss Elizabeth Verrill Sicard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Montgomery Sicard, has chosen April 27 for her wedding to John Seeley Booth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Dennison Booth of Elmira, N. Y.

Dr. and Mrs. William Daniel James of Hamlet, N. C., have announced to their friends here the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary James, to Francis William Howe of Cleveland, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Howe of Buffalo.

The engagement of Miss Doretta Elizabeth Rumsey to Albert R. Vreeland is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Rumsey.

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

We've been accused of being a fanatic on the subject of eye makeup—but we're not eating any of our words on that subject. The more we see of the tricks and trifles that add to the beauty of eyes the more vehement we become on the matter.

Until you realize what a little smartening up around the orbs will do for your face you just don't know all about making the most of your facial possibilities. Messy brows might be a starting point. Even in this age, when being groomed to the extreme is expected of all women from millionaires down to the poorest of us, there are lots of women who don't keep their brows trim and to whom trimness would be infinitely becoming. Not that we argue in favor of the thin line sketched in more or less at random with a pencil. That's usually a mistake. But brows perfectly groomed, with no growth of grassy brush between the eyes, give a suavity that's a real contribution to good looks.

Then there's the matter of darkening the brows and lashes. Poets may like pale hands, but we've never read a sonnet to pale brows and lashes. If nature applied color with a stingy hand, mascara and pencil should not be disdained. Darkening will do wonders not only for the eyes but for the expression of the entire face. And the effect won't be theatrical unless you wield your brush as if you were painting a house. A little practice and you can do it so deftly there isn't a hint of the theatrical, overdone effect.

Next comes shadow. Time was when it was considered a pretty risky bit of beauty business. Not now. The woman who prides herself on being smartly made up all the time would feel undressed without her eye shadow, even at 10 in the morning. When you look at her you aren't conscious of the shadow itself; you're aware only of the intensity of her natural eye color. She knows how to use the colorful pastes with deftness.

Look into the matter, by all means, if you want to make the most of your makeup.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., March 24.—The White Sox put on a little hitting act today and it was more than sufficient to put a stop to the Pittsburgh Pirates, who had manhandled them in three previous barnstorming engagements. They reserved a large quantity of their power until the last two innings, thus accumulating seven runs, which led them to a 10 to 7 triumph. Prior to the finishing touches, the Pirates felt comfortable with a 7 to 3 advantage.

Three of the Sox athletes were special standouts in the business of making the final day in Los Angeles a howling success. One was Vernon George Washington, who tuned in with a home run while a mate was on base in the fourth. Another was Zeke Bonura, who sent a round tripper to parts unknown while two pals were waiting in the seventh. This brought on a tie score. Then Bud Hafey, playing center because Al Simmons wanted another day of rest, sewed up everything by touching off a homer with two on in the eighth.

As a side feature Mr. Jim Dykes, the Sox manager, had himself bounced off the premises. When the Sox were getting started on their winning rally against Hal Smith in the eighth, Dykes raised a big rumpus about Umpire Babe Pinelli's judgment on a strike.

Trouble Loomed Early.

After two good innings Whitehead invited disaster by walking Pitcher John Salveson with one out in the third. Baby Waner slapped a double to right center, Salveson stopping at third. Both scored on P. Waner's single to center. Jensen grounded out to Bonura and the trouble would have ended here if Zeke had been able to make a good throw in his attempt to double P. Waner going into second. Vaughan caromed a single off Whitehead's shins. Traynor singled through the box to score P. Waner. Suhr's single to right sent Vaughan home.

The Sox weren't able to make any headway worth mentioning against Salveson's offerings in the first three innings, but the fourth was slightly better. This was where Washington broke into the picture with his homer into the center field end of the bleachers after Bonura had singled. The drive halved the Pirates' lead to two runs.

Vaughan Is a Bad Boy.

Vance encountered difficulties immediately after taking over the Sox pitching job at the start of the fifth. The first Pirate to welcome him was Vaughan, who had been rough with Whitehead. This time Vaughan whacked a double along the first base line and moved to third when Radcliff decided to play bounce with the ball before finally picking it up. Traynor succumbed to strikes, but Suhr rolled out to Bonura, and while this was going on Vaughan scampered in with the Pirates' fifth run.

The two bargain runs accumulated by the Pirates in the sixth began when Lucas, batting for Salveson, walked. Baby Waner lifted a tall fly to right, but Radcliff suffered an attack of blind staggers and permitted the ball to drop at his feet for a single. P. Waner scratched a hit to short, filling the bases. Jensen did the same, Lucas scoring. Vaughan walked to force Baby Waner home.

Sewell Starts Rally.

The Sox mustered enough strength to score a run as soon as Smith took over the Pirates' pitching in the sixth. Radcliff made up for some of his eccentric fielding by leading off with a double to right center. Hafey flied to left and Bonura walked. Washington banged a single past Lavagetto to score Radcliff. Then Appling tapped to the pitcher and Mauldin fanned.

The happiness in the seventh when the Sox scored four times to bring on a tie started with Sewell's single to

RANGERS DEFEAT CANADIENS, 2-1, IN WILD BATTLE

15,000 See Teams Trade Stick Blows.

New York, March 24.—(AP)—After one of the wildest free for all fist and stick fights seen on the Madison Square Garden ice in years, the New York Rangers conquered their third place foemen of the National Hocky league playoffs, the Montreal Canadiens, 2 to 1, in the first game of their elimination series tonight.

The Rangers carry the one goal margin into the second encounter of the series at Montreal Tuesday. The round is decided on the basis of total goals scored. A crowd of 15,000 saw tonight's game.

Bill Cook Is Injured.

The rough game reached its highest point in the middle of the second period when a high sticking affair between Bill Cook, Ranger captain, and Nels Crutchfield of Montreal, developed into a battle in which even the goalies engaged. Crutchfield drew a match penalty and Cook, in addition to being handed a major, received a gash in his scalp which required eight stitches.

Despite that handicap, the 39 year old veteran came back in the final period to score the odd goal.

When Cook and Crutchfield were waved to the penalty box after the former had received a slap from a high stick, the Ranger skated over and slapped his rival smartly on the face with his stick. Referee Smith wasn't looking then, but he turned in time to see Crutchfield lay his rival's head open with a terrific stick clout and the other members of both teams rush into the fray. The game was delayed for more than ten minutes while the fights and subsequent arguments were being straightened out.

Dillon Scores First.

Cecil Dillon of the Rangers scored the opening goal in the first period on a smart play with Lynn Patrick. Just after the second period battle, Roger Jenkins evened the count on a solo rush down the rink. The match penalty, which left the Canadiens short handed for 20 minutes, contributed to their ultimate downfall. With the extra man, the Rangers kept ganging the net until the defense and Goalie Wilf Cude concentrated on stopping Butch Keeling in a goal mouth attack. Then Bill Cook drew the puck out of a pile of players and flipped it into the empty net.

BY HOWARD BARRY.

St. Xavier High school of Louisville, Ky., won the national Catholic interscholastic basketball championship by defeating St. Mel of Chicago, 29 to 24, in the final of the twelfth annual tournament last night at Loyola gymnasium.

Third place was taken by the St. Francis Mission school team of South Dakota, which beat St. Mary's of Anderson, Ind., 33 to 15, in another of the evening's games.

Champions Are Real Champions.

Early in the tournament St. Xavier became one of the favorites by piling up a first round score of 77 points for a new record. But many followers of this quintet questioned what the Kentuckians could do against first class opposition. All such doubts were answered last night when St. Xavier convinced the capacity crowd that it has as much real class as any quintet that ever has taken the title.

During nearly the entire game both teams displayed almost equal ability, but there was one stretch of about five minutes in the third quarter when the Kentuckians played with a flawlessly judged pace such as seldom is attained by a prep team. At the start of those five minutes of superb play the Kentuckians were trailing, 14 to 12. When the five minutes had ended they were leading, 22 to 14. Such brilliantly sustained attacks are quite common when the opposition is not strong, but St. Mel demonstrated that it is one of the most powerful teams ever to reach the final.

Lally Comes Through.

Every player on the St. Xavier team fulfilled his part perfectly during that great drive. Rangy Harry Blandford maneuvered near the free throw line, feeding passes to Lally, Reverman, Filburn, and Magruder, who in turn kept the ball moving with a confusing rapidity until one or the other got in close for a shot. Lally distinguished himself at this stage with three baskets in quick succession.

That sustained drive was the turning point of the game. Up to that time the score had been tied repeatedly and the lead had shifted several times. But thereafter the St. Mel boys never were able to get to the front no matter how courageously they tried. A few minutes before the end they came within two points of their adversaries, bringing the score to 26 to 24. But a free throw and a field goal carried St. Xavier beyond reach.

Pare, waiting beneath the basket, took a swift pass from Neu and scored the first field goal of the championship game. A few seconds later, the same play worked again. Then Reverman and Filburn each sank free throws for St. Xavier.

The St Mel defense was caught unprepared when Reverman threw a pass half the length of the floor to Filburn, who scored before the racing guards could reach him. Then Blandford, standing near the free throw line, passed to Reverman as the latter came dashing in for a short shot that was good. This gave St. Xavier a 6 to 4 lead as the quarter ended.

St. Mel Scores Twice.

As the second period started, Magruder made two free throws for the Kentuckians, but St. Mel came back to tie the count at 8 to 8 when Naughton tipped in a rebound and Palm scored from under the basket.

Again St. Xavier forged ahead as Reverman dropped in a difficult shot from the side line and Lally flashed under the basket for a short toss. St. Mel cut into this lead when Neu made good on two free throws. Then, just before the gun ended the half, Pare sent the ball swishing through the net from well down the sidelines, tying the count at 12 to 12.

Pare took St. Mel into the lead as the third quarter began by tipping in a rebound, but Reverman replied with a shot through the hoop from several yards out. After an intricate change of passes with Reverman Filburn worked his way under the basket and scored. Then Lally counted three times in quick succession, taking passes from Filburn and Reverman. Just before the period ended Pare made a free throw to make the count 22 to 15 in favor of St. Xavier.

St. Xavier Leads, 24-19.

Naughton made two free throws for the west siders soon after the fourth quarter began. Then Filburn scored for the Kentuckians, but Neu came

CUBS DEFEAT OAKLAND; THEN LOSE TO SEALS

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

San Francisco, Cal., March 24.—Lefty Larry French this afternoon blew up for five singles good for three runs in the eighth inning of the game between the Cubs and the San Francisco Seals and the Coast leaguers triumphed, 5 to 2.

This morning the Cubs went across San Francisco bay, where they took the odd game of their three game series with the Oakland Oaks, 6 to 5.

The afternoon game was knotted at 2 to 2 on a homer by Steve Barath in the fifth inning, the last pitched by Lon Warneke. French started strong by striking out the first three batsmen to face him in the sixth, but got in a heavy jam at the outset of the eighth.

The setback ended the northern trip with a record of four Cub victories against three defeats. The outfit will return to Los Angeles tonight.

Root in Star Role.

Charley Root was the star of the pre-luncheon encounter. The veteran shut out the Coast leaguers on two hits in five innings of pitching and made a homer. Henshaw pitched the last four innings and wasn't nearly so good as in his two previous exhibition appearances. However, he made a great fielding play to end the game. The Oaks made seven hits off Henshaw, including a triple and a double.

MORNING GAME

The Cubs got production under way after two were out in the first inning of the morning game with Oakland. Klein doubled off the right field fence and scored on Lindstrom's single. Stainback forced Lindstrom for the third out.

Two runs were slapped on the Chicago ledger in the second inning. With one out Jurges reached second on Keyes' error. Goebel fanned, but Root drove a line homer over the left field fence, scoring behind Jurges. Galan singled, but English lined to Molesworth.

Cubs Run It to 5 to 0.

The score became 5 to 0 in the first half of the third. Klein socked his second double, and Lindstrom walked. Stainback singled to left, scoring Klein. The runners moved up while Vice President Grimm was supplying his 15th consecutive out. Then Lindstrom scored on Jurges' long fly. Goebel lined to Hawkins.

Henshaw's string of scoreless innings in the exhibition season ended at nine, when the Oaks scored in the

BY WILFRID SMITH.

General admission tickets at 50 cents each for the Chicago-New York Golden Gloves bouts Friday night at the Stadium will go on sale this morning at 9 o'clock at THE TRIBUNE Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and in the lobby of Tribune tower. Twenty-one thousand reserved seats already have been sold for the eighth of the series between America's largest cities. There is a limited number of general admission tickets. Consequently if you hope to see the best 16 amateur boxing bouts Friday, this is your last opportunity.

Friday night's bouts will start at 8 o'clock when the flyweights in the secondary division enter the ring. They will be followed by the flyweight champions. This schedule will be followed on through the weight classes with the heavyweight champions staging the finale.

New York Is Here.

Each bout will consist of three rounds of three minutes each, a contrast to the two minute rounds which prevailed throughout the Tournament of Champions and the finals.

New York's Golden Gloves squad of 38 boxers, in charge of four coaches, arrived at La Salle street station yesterday morning shortly before 9 o'clock. The boys soon had been assigned their quarters at the Medinah club, ate lunch, and then reported to the club gymnasium for the first of four boxing drills which will conclude their preparations in defense of the intercity championship they won last year in Madison Square Garden.

Dr. Thomas De Naouley, team physician, announced the boys were enjoying splendid health and saw no reason why they wouldn't be just as healthy after they had met Chicago's 16 fighters. Yesterday's workout at the Medinah was secret as will be all the New York drills.

Chicago Squad Rests.

While New York was busily engaged in pitching camp, Chicago's boxers at the Illinois Athletic club enjoyed their first vacation since they reported to Coaches Johnny Behr and Freddie Caserio. The training has moved along according to schedule. The team rapidly is acquiring the proper spirit as well as sharpened weapons. Yesterday afternoon the squad attended the Monroe theater and saw the picture "Golden Gloves Champions," the official film of the 1935 tournament in which most of them were prominent actors.

Today the boys will be out before breakfast for their morning run through Grant park. And in the afternoon they'll be throwing gloves in the I. A. C. ring. This schedule will be followed tomorrow and Wednesday with only unlimbering exercises Thursday and the necessity of making weight at the official weighing in on Friday afternoon.

The intercity series, which dates back to 1928, is tied. Friday's results quite likely will break that deadlock. In 1928, at the Coliseum, New York and Chicago divided the 16 bouts with Chicago winning four of the last five matches to avert defeat. Since then Chicago has won three times and New York three times.

New York's Golden Gloves squad of 38 boxers arrived on a special section of the Twentieth Century yesterday morning enthusiastic over finally appearing on the scene of the eighth annual intercity series with the Chicago's Golden Gloves champions at the Stadium Friday night.

A few hours later the entire squad gathered in the gymnasium of the Medinah club of Chicago and resumed intensive drill. As soon as they had checked in the coaches ordered a brisk stroll up Michigan boulevard. The invaders were the center of attraction as they paraded along the boulevard attired in new blue and gold Golden Gloves sweaters.

The fight for places in the Friday matches was on in earnest during yesterday's workout. Coach Arthur Susskind, who fought under the name of Young Otto, informed the squad that except George Coyle and Jim Howell, the two open champions, no man had chinched a starting assignment.

Talking It Over

SAD SAM JONES picks John Whitehead, pitcher, and Beauford Rhea, outfielder, as outstanding rookies in the White Sox camp. . . . Asked how a pitcher's talent could be appraised in a few weeks' time, the Sox veteran said: "If he has a fast ball, he may make the grade. You can teach him a curve, but if he hasn't a fast one you may as well forget him." . . . Bill Hewitt, star end of the Chicago Bears, has taken a position in Tucson, Ariz., where his wife has been residing several weeks for her health. . . . He intends to remain there until time to report for football practice. . . . Len Shires, brother of the former Whataman, has signed with Des Moines in the Western league as an infielder. . . . University of Chicago claims its drum, more than eight feet in diameter, is the largest among college bands. . . . It required many days search of the Chicago stockyards to find animals big enough to provide skins for the oversized tympan. . . .

Ben Cutler, Yale football player in 1924, 1925 and 1926, is conducting his own orchestra in a New York hotel. . . . Glenn Cunningham, who won 53 races in 59 starts as a collegian, has traveled 60,000 miles and run 55 competitive miles since leaving the University of Kansas. . . . Snoopers in spring training camps report Jimmy Foxx's transition as a catcher is not as successful as Connie Mack anticipated. . . . Jimmy is having trouble with right hand curve balls. . . . Cavalcade comes running at Trainer Bob Smith's call and follows him around the stable like a pet dog. . . . Leslie Wheeler, Lake Forest sportsman, is being deluged with hawk and owl questions by his friends since he joined the staf of the Field museum, where he is specializing on birds of prey in his ornithological studies. . . . Rainwater Wells, end and half back for the University of Chicago eleven the last two years, is slated to get first crack at the quarter back position left vacant by the graduation of Tom Flinn. . . .

New York university's great basketball team loses only Capt. Gross, forward, and Nawrocki, guard, by graduation. . . . Primo Carnera's wrist watch is the size of an ordinary pocket timepiece. . . . King Levinsky, arriving in New Orleans recently, was asked by a promoter at what hotel he was stopping. . . . The King countered with, "What town is this?" . . . "New Orleans," replied the promoter. . . . "That's where I'm stopping," chirped the King confidently, "the New Orleans hotel." . . . Michigan's hocky squad, which won the Big Ten championship with 12 victories and a tie game in 14 starts, consisted of only eight players. . . . French Bordagaray, formerly with the White Sox and now with Brooklyn, spent 12 years studying the violin.

Jimmy Slagle, Cub outfielder in the days of Frank Chance, lives in Chicago, and it is said he never has been to a big league game since he retired as a player. . . . Al Simmons recently had to pay Uncle Sam close to $2,200 in back income taxes because his deduction for an $18,000 loss in stocks was not allowed. . . . One of the sights at P. K. Wrigley's ranch on Catalina Island is the saddle room, which contains all manner of riding paraphernalia, including a collection of cruel bits, many of which Mr. Wrigley wouldn't think of putting in the mouth of any of the 169 horses he owns. . . . Mr. Wrigley's $12,500 platinum, gold and silver saddle is in Phoenix, but Kaaba, his Arabian stallion, his favorite riding horse, is at his Catalina ranch. . . .

Ten Years Ago Today—Red Faber and the White Sox defeated Shreveport, 11 to 7. . . . Thirty-one teams were entered in the University of Chicago national interscholastic basketball tourney. . . . Sid Terris won a 10 round decision from Lew Kaluso at New York. . . . The New York Giants executed a triple play but dropped a 4 to 3 verdict to the Braves.

CARROLL, LOYOLA WIN; TAKE LEAD IN K. OF C. RACE

Beat Damen and Setters to Near Playoffs.

Carroll in the West division and Loyola-Hyde Park in the South advanced a step closer to the playoff game for the championship in the Knights of Columbus Basketball league yesterday when they won hard-fought battles to take the lead in their respective sections.

Carroll beat Damen, 27 to 25, at the West Side clubhouse, while Loyola-Hyde Park also rallied at the windup to defeat Setters, 28 to 20.

The second round will end next Sunday, with the two leaders meeting on Saturday night, April 6, for the league title. Setters in the west section and Quigley in the south still have a chance to tie for first place. Lineups:

CASH SCORES 26 POINTS IN COUNTY BASKET TOURNEY

Midget Cash, who scored 26 points for the Sneed Colored Stars in their victory over the Marcy Center Hawks last night, was the standout player in the series of eight games which opened the Cook county handicap basketball tournament at the Olympic gymnasium, 6148 Cermak road, Cicero.

The Schuessler A. C. dropped out and was replaced by the Southwest A. C.

Hank's All-Stars, 30; Sacred Heart C. Y. O. Ights, 24.

Capitol Service Station, 38; Epiphany C. Y. O., 30.

Novak Sports, 43; Berwyn Shamrocks, 29.

ST. LOUIS BEATS WIEBOLDTS, 2-1, IN 1ST OF SERIES

St. Louis, Mo., March 24.—(AP)—The Central Brewers of St. Louis defeated the Chicago Wieboldts, 2 to 1, today in the first of a three game series to decide the western divisonal championship of the national soccer cup competition.

Goals by Willie McLean and Bert Patenaude in the first period won the game for the Centrals. The Wonderbolts scored four minutes before the finish when Thompson dropped the ball in the St. Louis net on a free kick forty-five yards out.

The Chicago team resorted to rough play throughout the game, and the referee stopped play a number of times.

FRANCE DEFEATS GERMANY, 18-3, IN RUGBY MATCH

PARIS, March 24.—(AP)—France defeated Germany, 18 to 3, today in an international rugby match. There were no incidents such as last Sunday's when Frenchmen tore down Nazi flags in the stadium.

The play was extremely fast. The French showed superiority from the beginning, leading at the end of the first half, 8 to 3.

ITALY WINS; NAZIS BOO.

VIENNA, March 24.—(AP)—A booing and hissing crowd of 2,000 saw the Italian football team defeat Austria today, 2 to 0. A Nazi element among the spectators contributed to the anti-Italian atmosphere.

Two Chicago Yachts in Annual Race to Havana

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 24.—(AP)—Twenty-two trim sailing craft, the largest list in the history of the six year old event, have been entered for the annual St. Petersburg-Havana yacht race, which starts March 30. After the St. Petersburg to Havana race the skippers plan to sail to Key West in another race. Two yachts owned by Chicagoans, Henry Phillips' Wilma Mae and C. R. Parks' Aloha, are among the entries.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES—HERE'S LOOKING AT YOU!

Weinert and Miller Head Marigold Card

Billy Miller, hard hitting Milwaukee, Wis., boxer, will reopen his drive for recognition as a leading welterweight tonight at Marigold Gardens, Broadway and Grace street. His opponent will be the aggressive Walter [Puggy] Weinert of Chicago. The bout, scheduled for eight rounds, will head a card of six contests.

Miller will be making his first Chicago appearance since his setback at the hands of Mike [Kid] Frattini at the Stadium Feb. 15. He had won eight consecutive encounters before he tackled Frattini. His victims were Laddie Tonelli [twice], Billy Celebron, Jimmy King, Jim McFarland, Iowa Joe Rivers, Dick Sisk, and Joey Kaufman. He knocked out Kaufman, Tonelli, King, and Rivers. Following his second conquest of Tonelli Jan. 7 Miller's handlers, Joey and Lou Sangor, were priming Billy for matches with the division leaders. His embarrassment by Frattini necessitated a new start.

Nestor Bruggman, Catholic Youth organization welterweight, and Eddie [Sailor] Pearson will be the contending boxers in the six round semi-final contest. A four round preliminary will bring together Adam Smith, former Golden Gloves heavyweight champion, and Russ Conklin, Centralia, Ill. Other matches at this distance match Meyer Frager with Lou Vine, Al Pahl with Johnny Norton. Buck O'Neil will wrestle Kay Hoffman.

A six round encounter between Bill Reardon and Le Roy [Sailor] Born will feature the show tonight at Midway arena, 6115 Cottage Grove avenue. They are lightweights. Bobby O'Dowd and Duke Calloway are scheduled to fight five rounds in a bantamweight scrap. Other matches:

Al Turk vs. Frank Keevil [4], 150.
Sam Scoglio vs. Scotty McLean [4], 130.
Fred Cleveland vs. Popeye Nolan [4], 112.

Walton League Will Plan for Better Fishing

BY BOB BECKER.

Coincident with the election of James R. Offield, Chicago business man and outdoor enthusiast, as president of the Chicago chapter of the Izaak Walton League of America, it was announced yesterday that the Chicago Waltonians will embark on an active campaign in behalf of better fishing and hunting in Illinois.

Other officers of the local chapter who were elected recently are L. A. Colby, vice president; Fred N. Peet, treasurer, and Edwin F. Sutter, secretary.

Well Known Men on Committee.

A number of well known Chicagoans who are outdoor enthusiasts have accepted appointments to the advisory committee of the Chicago chapter. Among them are Albert W. Harris, Carter H. Harrison, E. A. Cudahy Jr., Paul H. Davis, Dennis E. Sullivan, Thomas A. Ambrose, Rodney Heetfield, Ralph H. Hobart, Harry Gephart Sr., Ames Castle, W. E. Clow, David K. Harbinson, A. K. Eddy, O. F. Cullerton, Sam Branch, Billings McArthur, John A. Cook, John Borden, Joseph A. Rushton, Ross A. Woodhull, Stuart Logan, George W. Rossetter, Dr. Preston Bradley, Dr. Wilfred H. Osgood, George H. High, W. W. Haerther, and E. N. Hurley Jr.

"A comprehensive program of activity in behalf of better fishing and hunting is being worked out by our executive committee," Mr. Offield explained. "It is my hope to make the Chicago chapter not only one of the largest in the league in point of membership, but also the most active group interested in hunting and fishing in the middle west.

Will Coöperate With Authorities.

"Looking to this end we shall cooperate with federal and state game authorities and with many private groups interested in conservation. Our complete program will be ready within a few days."

The organization of committees now is under way. There will be committees on better hunting, better fishing, legislation, and women's activities.

BOSTON STORE HOCKY SEXTET TRIUMPHS, 5-1

Beats Sault Sainte Marie in A. A. U. Tourney.

The Boston Store hocky team, city and state champions, defeated the Sault Sainte Marie Cubs, upper Michigan titleholders, 5 to 1, at the Stadium last night before 6,000 fans to enter the semi-final round of the western division of the National A. A. U. amateur tournament.

The Boston Store club established a 2 to 1 lead in the first period, then coasted to victory. The goals were scored by George Kovin and Teevin. Napoleon Menard got the loser's goal.

The Vodrazka Hornets, Chicago Metropolitan champions, defeated the Wisconsin State champions, 3 to 0, to enter the semi-finals, in which they will play the Boston store Tuesday afternoon.

The tournament started yesterday afternoon before a crowd of 5,000, which saw the tournament favorites, State Teachers college, St. Cloud, Minn., intercollegiate and state champion, defeat Muskegon, Mich., 5 to 0. In the sixth. After Tobin fanned on three pitches Mailho tripled to left and scored on Hawkins' fly to Demaree. English threw out Keyes.

The Cubs made a run after two were out in the seventh. Demaree singled and scored on Hack's double to right. Stainback was called out on strikes.

Tobin led off the eighth with a single to right, paused while Mailho lined to Stainback, and stopped at second on Hawkins' single to center. Keyes singled to right, scoring Tobin and putting Hawkins on third. Bryan walked, filling the bases. Muller flied to Galan, Hawkins scoring. Anton was thrown out by Henshaw.

McMullen singled and Tobin walked with one out in the Oaks' ninth. Then Mailho doubled to drive them home.

AFTERNOON GAME

The teams came out of the first three innings with the Seals possessing a 1 to 0 lead and the Cubs boasting a total of one hit of Stutz, a single by Warneke in the third.

The Cubs tied it up in the fourth. Cavarretta, on being reminded that First Baseman and Vice President Grimm had not made a hit in 17 times at bat, doubled to left and scored on Jurges' single to left. Hartnett flied to Marty and Warneke forced Jurges.

Cubs Lead for a Minute.

In the first of the fifth the Cubs forged ahead. Herman walked with one down and went to third on Klein's single to right. Demaree ran for Klein. Lindstrom singled through short, Herman scoring and Demaree taking third. Cuyler fanned after a 3 and 2 count and Lindstrom was doubled going to second.

The Cubs lead did not survive the inning, however. Barath led off the home half with a homer over the fence in left center.

Densmore opened the Seals' eighth with a single to center. Garibaldi popped to Herman, but Powers singled to right, putting Densmore on third. Marty singled to center, scoring Densmore. Norbert bounced a single past Cavarretta, scoring Powers. Demaggio singled to left and Marty came home. Norbert stopped at second. Norbert was out at third, O'Dea to Hack, on an attempted double steal. French threw out Barath.

Hawks Plan Change in That 0 to 0 Score

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

The world champion Chicago Blackhawks, a troupe of earnest young athletes who like to play wide open hocky at any and all times, returned home last night in one of those calm rages which can spell only a peck of trouble for any parties who meet up with them from here on.

Chief reason for their repressed ire was a visit to Montreal Saturday night, when they met the quarrelsome Maroons in the first game of the second place bracket for the Stanley cup and the world's championship. It proved to be a futile call, no goals being produced within the allotted 60 minutes, but the Hawks have every intention of remedying that condition tomorrow night when the second and final game of the series will be played at the Stadium. Since total goals for the two games decide the series, the boys will really be starting from just where they began Saturday night.

Maroons Just Check.

The Hawks have always been under the impression that a hocky rink is divided into three sections, but the Maroons are apparently of different view, judging from their play in the opener in which they confined most of their activities to two—their own territory and center ice. The champions were well aware that the Maroons' theme song for years has been "Check, Check, Check, the Boys Are Not Marching," and were prepared to meet them on that basis. The point of Saturday's game, however, was that the big red team overplayed the melody until it became a monotune and the Hawks naturally were forced to follow the tune themselves.

After all, if you are playing a team which refuses to play your kind of hocky, you cannot pick up the puck and go home mad. There is only one course to adopt in this situation, to play the other guy's kind of hocky, and that's what the Hawks did, so well, in fact, that they showed a perfect defensive game. That goes for all of the forward lines, as well as the defense men and Lorne Chabot, No. 1 goalie of the year.

Hawks Follow Suit.

The Hawks, cheered on by the presence of 53 wires from Chicago fans and the knowledge that they had scored 14 goals in their last three road games, went out to build up an advantage for the final game tomorrow night, but when they saw the way the Maroons wanted to play they followed suit. This was a large order, considering that the Montreal team outweighs them no little and is well schooled in the art of checking.

The Maroons, who left Montreal yesterday afternoon, will arrive today and work out shortly after. They will be without the services of Hooley Smith, their hook checking center, as they were in Saturday night's game. Smith picked up a broken right thumb a week ago in a personal scuffle with Red Dutton of the Americans, but the Maroons do not appear to miss him, even going so far as to consider his understudy, Bob Gracie, a better workman for the playoffs.

Tough for Morenz.

The players' postmortem, conducted on the train coming home, had to do largely with the two heartbreaking third period shots by Howie Morenz. On one of these, a whistling drive from just inside the blue line, it was agreed that Alex Connell, the Maroon goal tender, must have had a couple of angels astride his shoulders. Alex apparently was expecting Howie to pass the puck to John Gottselig just after they crossed the blue line and was totally unprepared for Morenz's quick shot. The Maroon doorman moved over instinctively on a split second's notice and made a miraculous unconscious save.

Yanks Defeat Braves, 7 to 3; Ruth Triples

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 24.—(AP)—Babe Ruth returned to action today after a day's illness, but his one hit wasn't enough against his former teammates and the Yankees defeated the Braves, 7 to 3. The Babe's hit was a triple in the third inning.

Ben Chapman took the hitting honors with a triple and two singles, while George Selkirk slammed out a home run. Jimmy De Shong pitched well for the Yanks, giving only two hits in the last three innings and pulling out of a hole after loading the bases at the start.

Score:

Boston [N.]	020	010	000—3 7 1

ATHLETICS, 6; GIANTS, 5.

St. Augustine, Fla., March 24.—(AP)—A ninth inning rally gave the Athletics a 6 to 5 victory over the Giants today as Philadelphia hammered Larry Benton for four runs. A triple by Bob Johnson, a double by Jimmie Foxx, and singles by Alex Hooks, Pinky Higgins, Ed Coleman, and Dib Williams made up the rally.

Philadelphia [A.]	000	010	014—6 10 0

DODGERS, 12; TIGERS, 6.

Orlando, Fla., March 24.—(AP)—Before the largest crowd ever to watch a game at Tinker field, more than 3,000, the Dodgers slugged out a 12 to 6 victory over the Detroit Tigers today. Van Mungo and Schoolboy Rowe started on the mound, and the former set the American league champions down without a hit in three innings, fanning five.

Detroit [A.]	000	240	000— 6 8 1

BUFFALO, 4; BROWNS, 1.

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., March 24.—(AP)—Buffalo defeated the St. Louis Browns today in an exhibition game, 4 to 1, although the Browns outhit the Bisons. Meyer's double, Mulleavy's single, and a base on balls with Clift's error accounted for two Bison runs in the first inning. McGowan hit a homer with Mulleavy on in the third.

George Ball and Miss Hofmeister Keep Net Titles

George Ball and Louise Hofmeister retained their singles tennis championships yesterday afternoon in the finals of the 108th Engineers' armory.

Ball, a Northwestern university sophomore, defeated last year's runner-up, Gene Quinn, in straight sets, 8-6, 6-1, 6-0. Although Quinn held a 4-2 lead in the first set, Ball's headwork coupled with effective alteration of sweeping drives and winning chops soon made the champion master of his opponent. So forceful and canny was Ball's technique that, after forging ahead in the first set from 0-40 in the decisive thirteenth game to an 8-6 triumph, the two time winner allowed his foe only 19 points in the remaining sets.

Ball needs one more victory to take permanent possession of the trophy.

Miss Hofmeister's conquest of Helen Bartavis took less than an hour. The loser was unable to cope with the champion's expertly angled net shots and powerful ground strokes.

In the men's doubles, George combined with his brother, Russell, to score a surprisingly easy victory over Frank O'Connell and Gordon [Bud] Braudt, 6-1, 6-2, 6-4.

WINDUP MIDGET AUTO RACE GOES TO HOUSEHOLDER

Ronnie Householder, driving an Elto special speedster, set a track record of 5:26 minutes to beat Jimmy Snyder in the main event of twenty-five laps in the midget auto races before 6,000 at the 124th Field Artillery armory last night.

In the ten lap class A event Johnny Sawyer won over Pat Warren. Art Foley and Tony Willman finished third and fourth.

Russell Powers, Trojan Guard, Killed in Crash

Los Angeles, Cal., March 24.—(AP)—Russell Powers, 21 years old, University of Southern California football player, son of the Rev. W. M. Powers, retired Baptist clergyman of Cleveland, O., was killed here early today when a car in which he was returning from a fraternity initiation crashed into a truck parked on a roadside curve without lights. Powers, a guard on the U. S. C. team last fall, was riding with Richard Parker and John Russell, fellow students. Russell and Parker were injured, but not seriously.

center. Vance sacrificed and Hayes filed to right. Radcliff walked and Hafey dropped a single behind short to score Sewell. This was where Bonura stepped in with his high powered homer over the fence in center, scoring Radcliff and Hafey.

Shea walked to open the eighth, but the pass was delayed by the banishment of Dykes. Vance popped out trying to bunt, then Hayes singled to right, and Radcliff popped out. Here Hafey boosted the ball over the left field wall for the three runs that assured victory.

The Sox and Pirates move over to San Bernardino tomorrow for a two day series. In the first game there Sam Jones will make his first appearance of the year. He'll be assisted by Ted Lyons and possibly John Rigney. Bill Swift and Waite Hoyt will pitch for the Pirates.

FEAR OF WHEAT FAMINE REMOVES LIMITS ON CROP

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Cognizance of the possibility that another short wheat crop this year is not improbable was taken last week by the Agricultural Adjustment administration when the curtailment plans for the 1935 spring wheat crop were suspended.

The philosophy behind the AAA program from its inception has been to bring better prices for farm products by creating scarcity or, in the words of the program's supporters, "to balance production and consumption." Up to the present all the efforts have been directed toward bringing about this end by restricting production.

The disastrous drouth of 1934 all but knocked the so-called scarcity philosophy into a cocked hat. Another year of short crops and the consequent necessity of depending to an even greater extent on foreign countries for domestic supplies would almost certainly deal the death blow to the whole program.

End of Experiment Foreseen.

For this reason the AAA's retreat on its production control program, as signalized by the wheat action, is looked upon as particularly significant. In the opinion of many it marks the beginning of the end of the attempt to produce high prices by artificial curtailment.

Normally the announcement of an increase in wheat acreage would have a depressing effect on market prices of the grain. Instead, however, wheat futures, including the new crop deliveries, continued to advance on the Chicago Board of Trade last week. At the end of the week the principal future was selling approximately 2 cents a bushel above the price level prevailing a week earlier.

Another short wheat crop would be far more serious than it was in 1934. The shortages of the last two years came in the wake of several years of abundant production.

Earlier Surplus Is Factor.

Surplus stocks had been built up to an abnormal point by the government's previous unsuccessful attempt to control prices. The country entered the current crop year with a carry over sufficiently large to absorb the deficit in the year's production and still leave a margin of safety.

By July 1, however, this surplus will have been reduced to between 100 and 150 million bushels, or two or three months' domestic supply. If the 1935 crop should fail to exceed the 500 million bushel figure of 1934, every kernel of grain in the carry over would be needed to meet theoretical domestic requirements of 650 million bushels.

Nor does a series of short crops help the farmer economically, as Secretary Wallace concedes. Farmers usually get a better price for a small crop than a large one.

However, when one short crop follows another the economic effect on the country works to the disadvantage of the farmer, as well as other groups.

CHICAGO RETAIL MARKET SHOWS TRADE INCREASE

Gradual improvement in Easter retail trade was reported in the Chicago retail market last week, according to the Chicago Association of Commerce. Warm weather helped to stimulate buying. Wholesale activity clung to levels of recent weeks. Most satisfactory progress was shown by mail order and chain store concerns. Employment and wages gained slightly. Building circles noted slight improvement, while public utilities continued to forge ahead of last year.

Tonnage on Ohio River Reported in 2 Month Gain

Cincinnati, O., March 24.—(AP)—Marked increases in freight tonnage on the Ohio, Monongahela and Allegheny rivers were recorded during January and February of this year, over the comparable period of 1934, Col. R. G. Powell, United States division engineer, reported today. Tonnage on the Ohio river increased from 901,495 to 1,428,293 tons; on the Monongahela, from 1,808,031 to 2,974,481, and on the Allegheny from 189,676 to 238,270.

Weekly Tobacco Price Index Registers Decline

The stitch tobacco index declined from 126.0 to 122.9 during the current week, with loose leaf spot averaging 16.1 cents a pound compared with 16.5 cents in the preceding week.

PULLMAN, INC., IS RESTORED TO PROFIT BASIS

1934 Income Equals 76 Cents a Share.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

Restoration of sleeping car and manufacturing operations in 1934 to a profitable basis after losses for two years, and indications that earnings in the sleeping car department would have been higher had the eastern roads followed the lead of the western and southern lines in reducing passenger fares, are highlights of the annual report of Pullman, Inc.

David A. Crawford, president of the Chicago company, reported that the parent company and subsidiaries in 1934 had a consolidated net earning of $2,957,669, or 76 cents a share, as compared with a net loss of $2,672,864 for 1933. Dividend payments of $3 a share in 1934 necessitated a draft of $4,503,811 on surplus.

Lists Favorable Factors.

Among the factors favoring increases in the company's business, Crawford said, were reduction of fares and elimination of the Pullman surcharges in a large part of the country, the further expansion of air conditioning equipment, and the introduction of new types of railroad equipment, such as streamlined trains.

Offering an important possibility for the future, the report indicated, is the fact that the railroads have not been making the replacements of equipment which they eventually will have to do.

Adverse factors, Crawford pointed out, include increased railroad operating costs such as restoration of the old wages, the pension plan, continuing advances in the prices of materials and supplies and a hesitancy on the part of the roads to buy freight cars because of the federal transportation coördinator's proposal for a general freight car pool from which all roads would draw freight equipment.

Gross Revenues Rise.

Crawford said that the expansion in the volume of rail passenger travel last year produced an increase in the gross revenues of the sleeping car business from $39,216,000 to $44,524,000, yielding an earning of $597,355 for 1934, as contrasted with a loss of $1,220,034 in 1932 and $564,426 in 1933.

Regarding manufacturing activities he said that notwithstanding the low volume of new car production, this division with the aid of a good volume of air conditioning work and miscellaneous parts sales earned a profit of $1,202,591, as contrasted with losses of $4,074,830 in 1932 and of $3,826,077 in 1933.

"Part of the improvement in the gross revenues from sleeping car operations is assigned to the increase of business and tourist travel following recovery in general business conditions, and part to the reduction in over-all cost of rail passenger travel in certain major rate regions," Crawford stated.

Reduced Charges Aid.

"In those regions the removal of surcharge on the cost of Pullman accommodations and marked lowering of the rail charges for transportation in Pullman cars effective Dec. 1, 1933, produced a steady improvement throughout 1934 in the occupancy of Pullman cars as compared with 1933.

"This improvement over 1933 did not obtain in such marked degree in those regions where the Pullman surcharge was maintained and where there was no general reduction in the over-all cost of rail passenger travel.

"The interstate commerce commission is engaged at this time in a general investigation of rail passenger rates and arrangements. From the course of this investigation there is indication of possible countrywide elimination of the surcharge on Pullman tickets, together with some modification of other components of passenger rates now in effect in certain rate regions.

Believed Spur to Travel.

"It is believed the resultant rate attraction would contribute to a revival of both Pullman and railroad passenger revenue, by activating potential rail travel severely repressed or diverted during the depression period. Retention of existing differentials—particularly where extreme in amount—between rail rates charged for transportation in Pullman cars and those applied in coaches, or the imposition of new charges of this kind in regions not heretofore affected, will of course tend to offset removal of the surcharge and to lessen the use of Pullman accommodations.

"Obsolescence of existing equipment has been accelerated during the past few years by the development of new types of freight and passenger cars, with demonstrated possibilities of materially reducing operating costs and of contributing to improvement in service and efficiency. It is therefore obvious that considerable modernization of equipment stocks is indicated for the future.

Financing Terms Favorable.

"Railway management is fully cognizant of this situation and will undoubtedly embark upon an adequate program of improvement when traffic and earning encouragement is present. Financing of equipment purchases has been and still is available on favorable terms by governmental agencies."

The report said that 5,029 cars were operated in 1934. At the end of the year 1,291 air conditioned cars were in use and there is now under way a program for the equipment of 2,000 additional Pullmans for service during the coming summer.

The consolidated balance sheet showed current assets of $69,474,997 at the end of 1934 including $35,767,176 cash and government securities, compared with $78,622,472 including $35,860,680 cash and governments in 1933. Current liabilities stood at $10,512,517, as compared with $10,663,844 at the end of 1933. Surplus was reduced from $59,770,868 at the end of 1933 to $50,893,430 at the end of 1934.

Pure Oil Cuts Funded Debt; Profit Drops

Operations of the Pure Oil company and subsidiaries in 1934 resulted in a loss of $884,872 as compared with a profit of $811,086 in 1933, according to the annual report of Henry M. Dawes, president, to the stockholders. Mr. Dawes said, however, that the 1934 loss does not take into account the company's equity in the net income of associated companies, which amounted to $1,067,118. This income is used to retire outstanding obligations, which will increase Pure Oil's equity in the associated companies.

The report shows the company reduced its funded debt by $2,000,000 and bank loans and notes payable by approximately $300,000 during the year. Profits applicable to interest charges on the gold notes and depreciation and depletion reserves were $6,622,280 as against the interest and discount on notes of $1,924,410. After giving effect to depreciation and depletion reserves of $6,922,436 and all other charges the loss of $884,872 was arrived at.

Volume Higher; Prices Lower.

Mr. Dawes said the company had a slight increase in sales volume, but that net prices averaged lower. Taxes increased from $1,797,141 to $2,578,787. He estimates more than $35,000,000 was paid in gasoline taxes by consumers on the purchase of 500,000,000 gallons marketed by the company.

Additional oil reserves were discovered during the year, Mr. Dawes said, and the total is now estimated to be between 380,000,000 and 400,000,000 barrels, which makes the company fourth or fifth in size in the country with respect to reserves. The company during the year produced for its own account 18,538,826 barrels of crude oil and purchased 4,102,404 barrels. Purchase of crude, he said, was necessitated by limitation of the company's production under the proration orders of the government.

Mr. Dawes told the stockholders that collections showed an improvement over 1933, that the transportation system of the company is now completely adequate and that the refining properties are in good condition.

Anticipates Higher Prices.

He said he feels that the price of crude oil has been reasonably stabilized as a result of the control of overproduction and a constant market demand. He anticipates further advances in the price of gasoline and other oil products because prices of refined products are disproportionately low to crude.

"The ultimate effect of much of the experimentation that has been proposed at the expense of the oil business recently has been overestimated," Mr. Dawes continued. "The experience of the last two years very definitely indicates that the most radical proposals are the least apt to be put into effect. It is becoming more evident that the weight of economic influence must always be a controlling factor."

Current assets at the end of 1934 stood at $24,537,433 as compared with $25,080,328 at the end of 1933. Current liabilities were $12,861,931, compared with $12,215,744.

ENGINEER. PUBLIC SERVICE SHOWS A GAIN IN REVENUE

Warning of the destructive nature of proposed federal utility legislation, C. W. Kellogg, chairman of the Engineering Public Service company, yesterday addressed a special communication to stockholders along with the annual report for 1934.

"This bill," he wrote, "will destroy substantially all public utility holding companies and make such fundamental changes in the law governing the regulation of public utility operating companies and in the responsibilities and rights of private ownership as to make the successful operation of such companies doubtful, to say the least."

Gross earnings of the company and its subsidiaries were $48,887,699 for a gain of $1,953,477 or 4.7 per cent over 1933. The advance was more than offset, however, by mounting operating expenses and taxes. Taxes alone jumped $1,053,229. The balance after operating expenses and taxes was $18,038,258, a decline of $526,986, or 2.8 per cent, from the preceding year.

The net for 1934, as carried to surplus, was $1,111,859, compared with $1,376,627 for 1933. If allowances for deficiencies resulting from unearned preferred dividends of subsidiaries had not been required a balance of $2,496,261 would have remained in 1934 and $3,677,941 for the preceding year.

69 PCT. OF AUTO WORKERS VOTING NOT IN UNION

Detroit, Mich., March 24.—(AP)—The automobile labor board announced today that 69.5 per cent of the automobile workers voting for collective bargaining representatives in nominating elections conducted by the board throughout the industry have been unaffiliated with any labor organization.

The figures disclosed by the board included the results of elections through March 22, in which workers of 46 automobile plants cast a total of 146,948 ballots. The returns represented 85 per cent of the eligible voters in those plants, the board said.

Of the voters participating, the board announced, 13.75 per cent expressed affiliations with various factory employé associations; 7 per cent favored American Federation of Labor unions; 4 per cent the Mechanics' Educational Society of America. There were scattering voters for 10 other organizations. Of the ballots, 2.75 per cent were blank and 2.5 per cent were void for various reasons.

PRICE BOOSTING BARS RECOVERY, SLOAN ASSERTS

Reports Profit Again for General Motors.

Striking at arbitrary increases in costs of production as a barrier to recovery and at throttling progress by increasing tax burdens, President Alfred P. Sloan last night made his annual report to the 350,164 stockholders of General Motors corporation.

Net earnings for 1934 were $94,769,131, a substantial increase from $68,318,878 in the preceding year. They were 10.3 times preferred dividend requirements of $9,178,230. After deducting this payment $85,590,911, or $1.98 a share, was available for common stock. This compares with $74,034,831, or $1.72 a share, for 1933.

Paid $1 and Extra of 50c.

Regular dividends of $1 and an extra of 50 cents were paid on common, leaving $21,147,421 for reinvestment in the business. These compare with dividends of $1 and a 25 cent extra and surplus of $30,208,476 the previous year. Thus, 77.7 and 78.7 per cent of available earnings were paid in dividends in the two years.

Current assets rose from $320,015,607 to $365,844,870 during the year, while current liabilities increased from $76,188,711 to $90,198,504. Working capital at $276,645,880 now is larger than at the beginning of the depression—$251,237,732 on Dec. 31, 1929.

Earning figures do not include profit of $3,190,866, or 7 cents a share [based on old par rate of exchange] by the German company, Adam Opel A. G.

Effect of Tax Cut.

The General Motors chief cited the rapid gains made in automobile sales following removal March 1, 1933, of a 6 to 7 per cent tax on the price of cars. Despite the loss of this revenue, he pointed out, figures showed stepped up employment had given the government a net gain in income.

"Irrespective of necessities of the moment, it is economically unsound to levy taxes upon any single industry for the benefit of the general cause," Sloan said, in discussing "still greater burdens of taxation and discrimination" piled on the automobile industry.

He also criticized as unsound the proposal for blanket regulation of all forms of transportation. Regulation of railroads grew out of desire to protect the public from monopolies, he said, but "the inevitable result has been to interfere seriously with free enterprise, so vitally essential to progress. This, together with bureaucracy and political considerations, is a factor contributing to the present situation of our railroads.

Sloan Gives Views.

"Will not coördination resulting from bureaucratic regulation of all transportation destroy or neutralize inherent advantages of any new technocracy? Will not the yardstick of transportation cost be the efficiency of the past?

"Will not considerations of existing facilities outweigh the possibilities that progress offers in the form of lower transportation costs? How can it be possible to obtain the most out of each agency when they become one and the same?

"Would not a more effective approach to the problem be to establish each on its own foundation of fact and effectiveness and to permit each to develop its maximum contribution to our national economy?

"Competition again exists in the field of transportation. Let us restore the principle of free enterprise and encourage initiative. This is the road to progress."

Referring to progress other than that in motor car design and engineering, Sloan mentioned development of the new type Winton-Diesel engines and the part they are playing in the introduction of lightweight streamlined trains for faster service. He also saw broad opportunities for expansion in refrigeration and air conditioning. Of the latter, he said, "It will ultimately become an important component in every scheme of new construction involving closed space where human beings live."

The extent of General Motors' future participation in the aviation industry will depend upon legislation adopted by congress, he said.

The profit position of the corporation was affected adversely along with other industries by increasing costs, it was pointed out. Total wages were the highest since 1929, and the cost of materials rose.

Favors Price Reductions.

The one possible economic result of arbitrary cost raising, Sloan warned, is increased disparity between prices and purchasing power. This leads to reduced profits in that increased costs cannot be passed on to the consumer, or in less volume of business with an increase in unemployment, or both, he said.

"These circumstances, although unsatisfactory, would not be accepted as conditions under which industry must

MANUFACTURERS ASK ACCOUNTING BILL SUPPORT

The Illinois Manufacturers' association yesterday sent a resolution to congress asking for the support of the Clark-Shannon bill, now pending in both houses, which would require federal agencies to install approved systems of cost accounting.

The association points out in its resolution that private business is unable to meet with the increasing competition of governmental factories and stores because the latter do not have to be guided by the cost accounting principles which are essential if a private business is to survive.

The bill provides that all branches of the government, except the legislative and judicial, record all their costs, including insurance and taxes, which are not now included in the federal cost figures but are incurred by private industry. The bill also would require a governmental agency to submit bids to another branch of the government when in competition with private business.

WESTERN ELECTRIC COMPANY REPORTS LOSS OF $7,751,548

For the first time in five years business of the Western Electric company in 1934 showed improvement over the preceding year, although the upturn was insufficient to return operations to a profitable basis, the company's annual report discloses.

Net loss carried to surplus aggregated $7,751,548, against a deficit of $13,772,504 in 1933. Surplus of $18,283,604 Dec. 31, 1933, was thus reduced to $12,579,222 at the close of 1934. Sales amounted to $91,807,000, an increase of 32 per cent over the total of $69,511,000 a year earlier. Notwithstanding this gain the company operated at less than 20 per cent of capacity. Of the sales total Bell Telephone companies accounted for $84,693,000 and others $7,109,000.

Current assets as of Dec. 31, last, totaled $97,329,432, and current liabilities were $7,372,973, against $94,882,449 and $10,455,321 at the end of the preceding year.

LEAGUE EXPERTS TO INVESTIGATE TRADE ACCORDS

GENEVA, March 24.—(AP)—Through a special committee of experts, with the United States represented, the league of nations begins tomorrow an investigation of the so-called compensation and clearing agreements and their value to world economic recovery.

In a desperate attempt to canalise their trade nations have entered into about a hundred of these agreements. The prevailing opinion at Geneva is that the accords are makeshift measures which do not contribute to world rehabilitation because they impede the free flow of commerce.

A number of nations, however, believe these agreements should be adapted to existing conditions when systems of quotas, customs restrictions and a policy of economic nationalism render real trade freedom impossible.

Oscar B. Ryder of the United States tarif commission will represent Washington at these meetings. The experts were named by the economic and financial committees of the league by authorization of the last assembly.

Gen. Electric Reports Gain in Earnings

Operations of the General Electric company for 1934 resulted in net profit of $19,726,044, equal after taxes, charges and dividends on special stock, to 59 cents a share on 28,846,927 common shares, according to the company's annual report, issued yesterday by Owen D Young and Gerard Swope, chairman and president, respectively.

This compares with net of $13,429,739, or 38 cents a share, on the same capitalization in the preceding year. Regular dividends of 80 cents a share on both special and common stocks were paid during the year, which necessitated dipping into surplus to the extent of $155,410.

Orders received amounted to $133,660,302, compared with $142,770,791, an increase of 29 per cent. Sales billed totaled $164,797,317, against $136,637,268 in 1933, an upturn of 21 per cent.

Orders Exceed Shipments.

Orders received exceeded shipments by a substantial amount, so that unfilled orders were greater at the end than at the beginning of the year.

Current assets at the end of 1934 amounted to $177,369,050, including cash and marketable securities valued at the lower cost or market of $107,949,999. Current liabilities were $17,461,338. This compares with current assets of $175,314,394, cash and securities of $111,878,508 and current liabilities of $13,302,577 at the close of 1933.

Inventories after reserves are carried in the balance sheet at $51,318,978, compared with $45,467,577. This increase of 13 per cent resulted from a 29 per cent greater volume of orders received and from a large total of unfilled orders on Dec. 31, the report explains.

Investments Show Increase.

Investments, including advances to affiliated companies, aggregated $158,671,912, after revaluation, compared with $154,682,341 at the close of 1933. Revaluation resulted in a charge to surplus of $1,195,794.

The report shows that total income from affiliated companies and miscellaneous investments amounted to $5,608,911, compared with $4,376,971 in 1933, an increase of 28 per cent, and 3.6 per cent of the value of the investment, against 2.8 per cent for 1933.

The company spent $5,266,322 on new plants during the year and wrote off depreciation amounting to $7,325,997, compared with $6,179,511 in 1933. The net book value at which plants were carried at the year-end was $39,852,194, against $42,242,493.

OUTPUT IN STEEL SAGS TO 46 PCT. ON UNCERTAINTY

Makers Expect Some Reversal in Trend.

While steel producers expect an early reversal of the downward trend in operations, favorable factors last week were not strong enough to offset a general decline in forward buying with the result that output dropped 2 more points to 46 per cent of production capacity, says the magazine Steel.

There are possibilities of a new peak in operations this spring, the journal says, as more structural and railroad work matures. However, uncertainty is now apparent in the attitude of steel consumers. Purchases are being deferred in the hope that the government attack on the steel basing point system may be a break for the consumer.

Replenishments Not Needed.

Automobile assemblies for the week totaled 100,000, or 8,000 above the preceding week. One leading manufacturer, the journal says, has finished parts on hand to last sixty days and a few for thirty days.

Tin plate output is now at 85 per cent and mills are still adding to backlogs from container manufacturers. If obsolete tin mill capacity were to be disregarded they could be considered as producing at 95 per cent, says the magazine.

Operating Declines Predominate.

Regional operating changes last week included declines of 4 points to 47 per cent in Chicago, 2 points to 35 per cent in Pittsburgh, 2 points to 70 per cent in Cleveland, 1 point to 37 per cent at Buffalo and 2 points to 51 per cent in New England. There was an advance of 2 points to 60 per cent at Youngstown, while Wheeling held at 92 per cent, Birmingham at 55½, eastern Pennsylvania at 28 and Detroit at 33 per cent.

her father was overlooking one important fact . . . .

A Northern Trust Plan pointed out the flaw and suggested the needed safeguards

For this, her father was not making adequate provision. There was a possibility that, without sufficient cash or liquid assets in his $500,000 estate to satisfy these first costs, bequests might be critically affected.

A trust officer of The Northern Trust Company counseled with this man and his attorney. They made an analysis of his personal property. They studied his family situation, his wishes for his daughter, and his present estate arrangements.

Then, in the light of the latest revenue schedules, they presented to him a Northern Trust Plan. Death duties are now being conveniently anticipated. Assets have been co-ordinated to take advantage of every legitimate economy. A simple change in transfer arrangements has increased the net value of the estate by more than $90,000.

The creation of such plans stands prominently among the services of this old, estate-minded institution.

Upon request, a Northern Trust Plan will be developed for you, without cost or obligation.

Of special interest are our four booklets, "The Cost of Transferring an Estate." Each deals with an estate of different size: $250,000, $500,000, $750,000, and $1,000,000. When you write, please indicate which one you desire. There is no charge.

necessarily operate permanently," he said. "The objective should be a more vital contribution to industrial recovery through a reduction in prices in order to reach a greater number of buyers. In no other way can industry be stimulated to higher levels of activity. In no other way can the unemployment question be attacked intelligently. That is the thinking of the management, and its approach to this particular problem."

The principle of collective bargaining is accepted, as is the desire for more even production throughout the year, the report stated.

A table of executives' salaries was listed, showing 245 persons with total salaries of $10,000 or more. Of these, 130 range from $10,000 to $14,999 and 55 from $15,000 to $19,999. Thirty-four are paid between $20,000 and $29,999.

Two Get $100,000 or More.

Two men received $100,000 or more, with none over $120,000. One other man was paid over $80,000 while eight more received $70,000 to $79,999. One other was paid $60,000 to $69,999 while five took $50,000 to $59,999; two received $40,000 to $49,999, and seven were paid $30,000 to $39,999.

Total net sales amounted to $843,807,849, or 48.3 above the $569,010,542 of 1933. Pay rolls jumped even more—from $171,184,315 to $263,204,255, or 53.8 per cent. Total sales to dealers amounted to 1,240,447 units, a gain of 42.7 per cent from 869,035 units in 1933.

Dealers in the United States took 959,494 units, or 31.6 per cent more than 729,201 the preceding year. The corporation accounted for 39.7 per cent of new car business compared with its 42.9 per cent high mark of 1933. Sales overseas amounted to 220,560 units at a net wholesale volume of $202,263,625, compared with 119,989 units for $104,629 volume the previous year. Canadian sales make up the difference between these totals and the full sales totals.

UN. ENGINEERING AND FOUNDRY EARNINGS RISE

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 24. — (AP)—George T. Ladd, president of United Engineering and Foundry company, today reported increased earnings for 1934 and asserted "we are looking to 1935 with confidence toward a substantial advance to a better than normal level of operations."

Ladd pointed out that sales for last year showed "a substantial increase over 1933."

Net income for 1934 was $718,395, equivalent after preferred dividends to $1.58 a share on 416,118 shares of common, as compared with $401,018, or 82 cents a common share, in 1933.

Monongahela West Penn Public Service.

Investors' Guide: Will you kindly tell me what you think of Monongahela West Penn Public Service first 5½s, due 1953?—Mrs. B. M. A.

Answer: This unit of American Water Works and Electric company, an operating company, distributes electrical energy and gas, and operates buses and electric railways in West Virginia, Ohio and Maryland. Some of the cities served are Fairmont, Clarksburg and Parkersburg, W. Va., and Marietta, O. About 80 per cent of gross comes from sale of electricity.

Fixed charges have been covered by a fairly good margin over a long period, but in common with many other utilities a sharp decline was experienced in 1934. Net income for the twelve months to Nov. 30, 1934, was about 78.7 per cent of that for the preceding twelve months.

Charges were covered 1.49 times in the first nine months of 1934. In 1933 they were earned 1.61 times, against 1.48 times in 1932, 1.68 times in 1931, and 1.81 times in 1930.

Current assets on June 30, 1934, were $1,994,000 and current liabilities were $1,028,000.

The company is among those whose West Virginia rate schedules are being investigated by the public service commission of that state.

Campbell, Wyant & Cannon Foundry.

Investors' Guide: Please give me information on Campbell, Wyant. Thank you.—N. H. J.

Answer: The main phase of Campbell, Wyant & Cannon Foundry company's business is the production of an extensive line of iron castings for the automobile industry. Among its customers are General Motors, Ford and Chrysler. During recent years it produced a new brake drum and a new metal alloy, "Proferall."

A profit of $82,000 in the third quarter of 1934 held net loss for the full year to $17,000. The company incurred losses in each of the other quarters. In 1933 net income was $40,000, or 12 cents a share, against loss of $312,000 for 1932. Net income in 1931 was $191,000, against $638,000 for 1930.

Working capital on Dec. 31, 1934, was adequate. Current assets were $1,506,000, and current liabilities were $247,000.

MONEY POLICIES IMPEDE TRADE, BANK CRITICISM

Uncertainty and Fear of Inflation Created.

Chief objection to the administration's policy of monetary depreciation is not that it failed to exert an influence on prices but that the uncertainties engendered by the policy have tended to impede business recovery and that carrying the devaluation to such a low point has so expanded the monetary base that the way is opened for an ultimate rise in prices far beyond anything the sponsors of the policy originally intended.

Calls Reasoning Puzzling.

"By what reasoning it was believed cheapening the dollar on foreign markets would result in a prompt proportional rise in domestic commodity prices is somewhat puzzling," the survey comments. "In the case of international commodities it is clear that fluctuations in exchange rates result in price changes either in exporting or importing countries. These changes are gradually communicated to other prices, first to sensitive basic commodities, then to others, and finally to wages, real estate, and general values.

"But this readjustment may take many years and cannot be regarded as an immediate and automatic effect of a change in the price of gold. Success or failure of devaluation should rightly be measured by its effect on domestic commodities and in turn on business recovery.

Says Wholesale Prices Lag.

"While the exchange value of gold currencies in terms of the dollar has increased by approximately the amount of the devaluation, the advance in wholesale commodity prices has been much smaller and the increase in business activity has fallen short of what the advocates of depreciation predicted. In addition, it is uncertain to what extent the advance in prices and business activity results from depreciation and to what extent it is due to other measures."

"Operators Wanted"

Prepare at DeLEE with Mme. Louise

Exclusive beauty shops want operators who have been trained the DeLEE way, under Mme. Louise, Mme. Louise, internationally famous hairdressing and beauty culture expert, will aid personally in training you for a BETTER POSITION and a larger income.

At DeLEE you will find the ideal "set-up"—capable instructors who have had years of teaching experience, and up to date 100% equipment. Classrooms are colorful, light, and airy.

A RECOGNIZED SCHOOL.

The DeLEE University of Beauty Culture is the only beauty school which has been permitted to incorporate as a University in Illinois. DeLEE meets all requirements of the Department of Education and Registration. Why be satisfied with an old fashioned "trade school" training, when the DeLEE "university type" of schooling is available at no greater cost? Previous experience or a high school education NOT necessary. Day and evening classes. Tuition reasonable and payments can be arranged to suit your convenience.

A visit to DeLEE won't obligate you. It will open your eyes. Come in TODAY.

A MARINELLO Story for Girls Like You

ONE DAY LAST FALL A GIRL just like you read our ad, mailed the coupon, and from our reply learned of the wonderful opportunities offered Marinello beauticians in the beauty profession.

IMMEDIATELY she enrolled in our school and found the work so interesting and delightful, in the large sunny class rooms equipped just like regular beauty shops, that the time quickly passed and before she realized it graduation time had arrived. How thrilled she was when she received her certificate. Now she is earning a GOOD SALARY as a successful Marinello operator and has already made plans to open a shop of her own this summer. You can do the same.

Visit Our School Today.

MARINELLO'S record of 55,000 graduates in the past 33 years cannot even be approached by any other school in the world!

NOW!—Marinello Offers New Easy Payment Plan

Free student employment service or we will help you establish your own business. Complete set of instruments, textbooks, and all cosmetics furnished without charge to all students enrolling for day or evening classes now forming. Mail the coupon for full information and FREE illustrated booklet, including set of eight photographs showing various MARINELLO classes at work.

COURTNEY DEFIES ORGANIZED GANGS AFTER HE IS FIRED ON IN CAR. Scene looking north on Normal boulevard at 71st street where state's attorney narrowly escaped death early yesterday. No. 1 on artist's sketch shows the assassins' car approaching from the rear, and No. 2 the gunmen's car as it passed Courtney's machine.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

OWNER OF ROADHOUSE QUESTIONED BY POLICE. Elmer Cowdrey, operator of Club Rendezvous, and his wife at Morton Grove police station yesterday when efforts were made to learn possible causes of fire, fatal to six.

BULLET HOLES IN STATE'S ATTORNEY'S CAR. In the rear seat of this automobile, on the side farthest from the camera, sat Mr. Courtney yesterday when attempt was made on his life. Next to him sat Ald. Perry.

CLUB'S BARTENDER. Robert Bunton, roadhouse employe, tells Morton Grove police about fire.

ROADHOUSE FIRETRAP IN MORTON GROVE COSTS 6 LIVES; MANY HURT. Exterior of the Club Rendezvous after fire yesterday turned the place into a shambles. At the right of the men in the photograph is the single door available to patrons as entrance and exit. The door opened inward and barred escape of victims when crowd jammed against it.
